Gandhi Shot Dead at Prayer By Hindu Assassin

NEW DELHI, Jan. 30 (AP)—Mohandas K. Gandhi was shot to death tonight by one of the Hindus he led to independence. He was 78. The frail and wizened little political and spiritual leader was the target of three bullets fired at close range at his prayer meeting on the lawn of the sumptuous Birla mansion, the estate of an Indian industrialist who long had supported Gandhi. Police arrested the assassin immediately. They said only that he was a Hindu from Poona. He was held incommunicado at police headquarters.

Bystanders said Gandhi slumped forward as the third shot rang out. He seemed unconscious ashe was carried to his quarters in Birla House. The secretary said death followed within a half hour.

A crowd of several hundred persons formed about Birla House, many of them weeping.

Sobbing bitterly, Gandhi's personal secretary, S. Kalyanam, told the Associated Press:

"Bapu is dead."

Bapu is the affectionate name for Gandhi, meaning father. To millions of his followers, he was known as Mahatma, or great-souled one. His full name was Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi. He was 78 years old.

Death came less than a year after he achieved his life's main goal of independence from Great Britain for the teeming subcontinent of India.

Paradoxically, however, Gandhi considered his triumph a failure because India and her 400,000,000 people were divided into separate dominions of India (Hindu) and Pakistan (Moslem). The partition resulted in bloody, destructive communal warfare between Moslems on one side and Hindus and Sikhs on the other.

LAST OF HIS FASTS

It was in an effort to end the bloodshed that Gandhi undertook this month the last of his many fasts. After five days in which he threatened to starve himself to death, Gandhi broke his fast Jan. 18 on the "pledge and counsel" of friends in both dominions. He said they had assured him of "complete unbroken friendship" between all communities.

During the tense days of his fast, some of the more militant shouted bitterly in the streets and before his living quarters:

"Let Gandhi die."

But there was every indication that this was the view of a tiny minority, embittered by the communal warfare.

Shortly after the fast a bomb exploded at a near-by prayer meeting, also in the Birla mansion estate, but did no harm. A Hindu was arrested.

Some Hindus, their womenfolk violated in the communal upheavals, had resented Gandhi's pleas for peace with the Moslems.

MINGLES WITH CROWD

The shooting scene was a patch of lawn on the grounds of palatial Birla Mansion, from which Gandhi, since December, had been conducting public prayer meetings. It was there that he undertook his recent fast.

Bystanders said the assassin had mingled with the crowd at the prayer meeting. He was conspicuous in khaki clothing which might have come from army surplus stores. Suddenly, it was said, he drew a pistol and fired three times.

BULLETIN

NEW DELHI, Jan. 30 (AP)—High police officials said tonight Mohandas K. Gandhi was slain "for political reasons—because some persons did not agree with his appeals against violence."

HIS PEACE PRAYER

NEW DELHI, Jan. 30 (AP)—Mohandas K. Gandhi said on his 78th birthday Oct. 2:

"With every breath I pray God to give me strength to quench the flames (of communal strife in India) or remove me from this earth.

"I, who had staked my life to gain India's independence, do not wish to be a living witness to its destruction."

British Hero, 28 Others Lost In Plane Crash

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP)—Sir Arthur Coningham, British air hero of World War II, is believed to have been lost with 28 other persons today aboard a British commercial plane, long overdue at Bermuda.

A Bermuda dispatch said the plane was reported crashed 440 miles northeast of the island. Seven search planes are seeking wreckage.

FRANKFURT, Jan. 30 (AP)—U. S. Air Force headquarters reported today the sighting of plane wreckage in the lower French Alps, and said another plane, presumably a B-17 in the search squad had crashed 20 miles east of the wreckage.

The first plane was believed to be a DC-3 transport which disappeared Tuesday while en route from France to Italy. It carried three American women and five children, dependents of U. S. soldiers in the Trieste area.

Body of Gandhi To Be Cremated

NEW YORK, Jan. 30—India's Prime Minister, Jawaharlal Nehru, describes the assassination of Mohandas K. Gandhi as a "great disaster."

The Dominion leader, his voice heavy with emotion, announced the body would be cremated in accordance with Gandhi's wish. The body will be taken from Birla House tomorrow at 11:30 a. m. and cremation will be at 4 p. m. Nehru designated Saturday as a day of fasting and prayer for all India.

Gave Demoralized, Cringing Folk Pride

By the Associated Press

For more than 40 years a shriveled, physically puny man, Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi was a dominant figure in the life of India, a driving force in the long, bitter struggle for Indian freedom.

The Mahatma (Great Soul)—as the Hindu nationalist and religious leader was called during most of his career—was variously regarded as a saint, a revolutionary and reactionary, a patriot, a clever and unscrupulous politician, a saboteur and appeaser of Japan.

In these conflicting estimates there is no doubt, aside from the political issues involved, that millions in teeming India regarded his as nothing less than a god or saint, although he himself meekly denied it.

CHANGED FACE OF INDIA

One of his disciples, Jawaharlal Nehru, who rose to become an important national figure in his own right, said of him:

"He has changed the face of India, given pride and character to a cringing and demoralized people, built up strength and consciousness in the masses and made the Indian problem a world problem."

A current American writer, John Gunther, once called him "an incredible combination of Jesus Christ, Tammany Hall and your father."

Some of the wealthiest men in India supported him and uncounted millions in poverty-stricken Indian villages followed him blindly.

For many years he was a constant source of worry to Great Britain. His favorite method of getting political results was to fast and to admonish his followers in a policy of nonviolence.

NINE OFFICIAL FASTS

In the last quarter of a century, Gandhi conducted nine "official" fasts. These hunger strikes, in which his frail frame was reduced almost to a skeleton, usually but not always, brought results.

The British, fearing the public reaction in the event of death, met most of his demands or effected compromises.

In the midst of the turmoil of the second World War, with the problem of Indian independence a paramount one to Great Britain, he went on his latest fast on Feb. 10, 1943 for an announced period of 21 days. He had been a "prisoner" then for six months, behind barbed wire in the ornate palace of the Aga Khan at Poona.

This fast, unlike many others, was not "unto death," but was a protest against his confinement. He subsisted on fruit juice mixed with water. All India and British officialdom, as well, was apprehensively alert when the announcement of the fast was made public.

Gandhi entered upon his fast

Eyewitness Story

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP)—Robert Stimson, BBC correspondent, witnessed the assassination of Mohandas Gandhi.

He cabled these impressions:

"The shots did not sound very loud—they reminded me of firecrackers. When they were fired, Gandhi fell back.

"Immediately after this I saw some of Gandhi's entourage grappling with a heavy set man in a khaki bush coat. He had blood on him, no doubt from wounds inflicted by his assailants.

"Gandhi was picked up by some of his followers and carried into Birla House, where he was taken into a back room," Stimson said.

Suddenly realization of what had happened swept through the crowd and a terrific cry of grief arose.

"The crowd of four or five hundred people wailed with a grief most moving to see," Stimson said.

"Men and women wept and beat their breasts."

Gandhi had arrived a few minutes late for his prayer meeting. But when he walked across the lawn from Birla house, Stimson said, "he was looking healthier and sprightlier than he had since his recent fast."

Third Victim Of Mother's Gun May Live

While his dad prayed at his bedside, James W. Power, 5, survivor of a shooting tragedy that took the lives of his mother and infant sister, battled for life today at Framingham Community Hospital.

A bullet was removed from the youngster's brain, and firemen and other volunteers stood by ready to donate blood. Doctors said the child had a fair chance of recovery.

The victim, son of James F. Power, State fish and game director and president of the Framingham Chamber of Commerce, was found shot through the left temple in the living room of the Power home in Fruit st., Hopkinton.

James F. Power

Dead in her crib in a bedroom was his baby sister, Nancy Marie, 5 months and on the kitchen floor was the mother, Mrs. Edna Watt Power, 33, who police said shot both youngsters and then took her own life with a bullet. A .22-caliber target pistol lay at her side.

SUDDEN INSANITY

Power, whose term as head of the State game commission expires tomorrow, said his wife had been in poor health since the birth of Nancy Marie, but he had no idea she was depressed to such an extent as to commit such an act.

No suicide note was found, and investigators expressed the opinion the mother suddenly was swept away in a fit of insanity.

PHONE UNANSWERED

State Det. James Cuniff, after questioning members of the family, relatives and doctors, said Mrs. Power had done the shooting. He said he had learned she had been in an extremely nervous condition since the birth of her daughter and was being treated by a well known Boston specialist.

The tragedy might not have been discovered until Power arrived home from the State House had it not been for anxiety of his mother, Mrs. Bridget Power. The latter, as well as Power, himself, had called the house in the afternoon and received no answer.

At last she called a neighbor, Mrs. Elvira H. Pottle, and asked her to see if anything was the matter. Mrs. Pottle went to the house with Mrs. Millicent Stanger and they discovered the bodies.

Dr. Joseph F. Annunziata, who had been treating Mrs. Power, was called. It was he who informed the police that the woman had been in ill health since the birth of her last child.

Capt. Harry Hamilton and Chief John Hilditch of the Hopkinton police took charge, and called in Medical Examiner Dr. Harry McCann.

FAMILY WELL-TO-DO

Power, in addition to being fish and game director, is proprietor of an auto accessories shop in Framingham and is considered by his neighbors to be well-to-do.

He commutes daily from his home to his State House office. His term as director, which began with his appointment by the then Gov. Maurice Tobin in 1945, has been a stormy one under Gov. Bradford and was marked by a clash between them last December.

You Can Have It, It's Too Cold for Us

The highly touted "good, old-fashioned New England winter" was a pain the neck today—also in the ears, nose and feet—as the coldest air mass in three years hammered the mercury down to 3 below zero in Boston and much lower in the suburbs.

Three years ago, on Jan. 25, the thermometer read —4 here.

More exasperating than the present Arctic atmosphere was the weatherman's gloomy prediction that the cold was here for at least five days.

For tonight there was a promise of zero temperatures in the city, and much lower in the interior suburbs, maybe 10 or 15 degrees below.

In Quincy some 2000 high and elementary school pupils were sent home because the heating system was out of kilter in the senior high and trade schools and the Cottingham Grammar School.

Sample mercury readings for New England were: Mt. Washington, —41; Lebanon, N. H., —25, Greenville, Me., —19; Portland, —14.

Closer to the Hub the following readings were reported: Bedford, —9; Lexington, —10; Arlington, —6; Reading, —12, and Winchendon, —20.

Gas Plant Union Head Says Men Will Continue to Work

With both sides making last-minute efforts to reconcile their differences Gov. Bradford went ahead today with plans to seize the plant of the Eastern Gas and Fuel Associates in Everett, in event the threatened wildcat strike of 900 employes becomes effective at midnight tonight.

In a statement issued last night, the Governor said he was prepared to call for volunteers to man the nation's largest gas plant, which serves more than 1,000,000 consumers in Boston and 34 outside cities and towns, if the walkout materialized.

A hint that the strike may be averted came from Michael Farraher of Malden, president of Local 283 of the Gas, Coke and Chemical Workers' Union.

"No strike vote has been taken," Farraher said. "As far as I know, the men will continue working."

Gov. Bradford was taking no chances, however. In announcing he would invoke his emergency powers under the Slichter Law for state seizure, he added:

"A strike in the dead of winter which turns off gas in 350,000 homes, hospitals and industries would be one of the greatest disasters in New England. It simply cannot be allowed to happen."

At the same time the Governor warned union leaders that under provisions of the Slichter Act, injunctions could be obtained against the union as well as its leaders.

The Everett plant supplies the Boston Consolidated, the Arlington Gas and Old Colony Gas companies. In the event of a strike 64 hospitals, including the Boston City would be deprived of the essential fuel.

Bradford emphasized that not only would such a strike menace the lives of patients in other state institutions, but would cause untold suffering to thousands of families who depend on gas for cooking, heating and lighting.

He said:

"I am informed that if the gas producing furnaces are allowed to go out, it will take nine months before they can be put back into full operation again.

"Furthermore, 350,000 meters would have to be shut off as a safety measure, and I am told it would take more than three months before the meters could be turned on again as it is a job for skilled men."

While Bradford was preparing to take every possible measure to prevent interruption of gas service, the union and company ended another day of fruitless negotiation. They will meet again this morning.

The union demands include a 15-cents-an-hour increase in wages. Their present minimum is $1.16 an hour and the average wage, according to Gen. Charles Cole is $1.32 an hour. They also want a 4-cents-an-hour increase in the night differential and three weeks' vacation for employes with service of 15 years or more.

While the company has not announced anything officially, Cole said, representatives have agreed "semi-officially" to give the three-weeks' vacation after 18 years. At present the tenure required is 20 years.

The company has agreed to an increase of 13 cents an hour and has agreed to arbitrate any question in dispute.

Also the company officials point out that the concern is now giving a free life insurance policy of $1000 to each of its men, 15 days' sick leave, 15 half-days' sick leave, and that men called to serve as pallbearers at funerals are allowed off.

DAV Head Tells Members To Urge Solons Back UMT

Anthony D. Tieso, state commander of the Disabled American Veterans, today issued a call to the full membership of that organization to unite in a demand for immediate favorable action on the Universal Military Training bill.

To each Massachusetts senator and representative, Tieso sent the following telegram:

"Do you believe UMT is needed now? Will you vote for military training at this session? Will you subscribe to the petition to discharge the House rules committee from further consideration of the UMT bill, thus bringing it to the floor of House of Representatives where you may be recorded in favor or against the bill"

URGES POSTS DO SAME

In addition, Tieso said he has personally asked each DAV post in the State to send similar telegrams to the Congressmen in their districts.

The reference to the House rules committee was to prod that body into action. The UMT bill has been held up there without any indication when it would be reported out.

Such action is believed to be stymied by several committee members known to be hostile to the bill.

The National Security Committee has also joined the swelling ranks of organizations and individuals demanding UMT now.

VETERAN OF 2 WARS

Its state chairman, Clement Kennedy, Swampscott hotel man, is urging members in the Commonwealth to get fully behind the drive for adoption of the UMT program. Kennedy is a veteran of both World Wars.

"Telegrams should be sent at once to men like Rep. Leo E. Allen, Rep. Christian Herter, both members of the House rules committee, and to Speaker Joseph W. Martin, Jr., as well as to all our Congressmen in an appeal for swift action in favor of the bill," said Kennedy.

He pointed out that universal military training is one of the foremost planks in the National Security Committee's program.

Speaking as an individual, Stuart DeBard, prominent attorney and president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, said he has already sent telegrams to Rep. Richard B. Wigglesworth of his district, to Rep. Christian Herter, Rep. Leo E. Allen and House Speaker Martin.

American Legion State Commander John J. Sullivan, his organization recorded in favor of UMT, has already termed the bill "the most important piece of legislation before Congress."

Fire, 15 Blasts In Everett Plant

A general alarm fire which endangered firemen as explosions wracked the building, completely destroyed the 3-story wooden plant of McCabe-Repucci & Son, electrical contractors and fixtures, Dexter st., Everett, early today. Damage was estimated at $50,000.

Outside assistance from Medford, Chelsea, Somerville and Boston was called in as flames swept through the wooden building. As firemen fought the blaze 15 explosions, caused by combustible materials inside the building, endangered the firefighters.

In addition to the destroyed plant, two trucks were lost. Other trucks, housed in garages at the rear and sides of the large plant, were driven clear of the flames.

The fire was discovered by Nicholas G. Offreda, Lincoln st., Somerville.

Offreda was waiting for a street car to take him to work at Dexter st. and Broadway when he heard an explosion and saw flames shooting from the windows of the building. He called the fire department.

Zero weather handicapped firemen and several hoses had to be run more than half a mile.

A wooden fence which surrounded the plant, situated by itself, had to be broken down before firemen could bring their hoses to bear.

Firemen were also endangered when a side of the building collapsed and sent showers of sparks and timber crashing.

Gas tanks in truck sheds on either side of the building were believed to have been the reason for several of the explosions, as well as combustible materials inside the plant.

Royall Urges UMT in Hub Chamber Talk

Support of Universal Military Training as a means of supplying America's military forces with sufficient personnel to maintain an adequate defense was urged today by Army Secretary Royall speaking before a luncheon meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce at the Copley Plaza.

"The suddenness with which any future war would undoubtedly come," Royall said, "means that sufficient manpower must be promptly available. This means a Regular Army and a fully-manned National Guard and Organized Reserve . . . and in addition a youthful civilian reserve, supplied by Universal Military Training."

Sec. Royall warned that despite development of the atomic bomb, jet and rocket planes and guided missiles, the mainstay of our defense is still manpower.

"Men are not able to do their best without the aid of machines, but machines are able to do nothing at all without the aid of men," he added.

At least three or four million men should be prepared for the outbreak of war, Royall said.

The quantity and quality of the manpower of the military establishment is dependent on the attitude of community and business leaders throughout the nation, he told the Chamber.

3 Missing, 11 Hurt As Vermont Hotel Is Razed by Fire

ST. ALBANS, Vt., Jan. 30—Three persons were missing, 11 others burned and injured, and two score more leaped safely into high snowbanks today when fire destroyed the 136-year-old Jesse Welden Inn with loss estimated at from $200,000 to $500,000.

Fire Chief Richard H. Sweeney reported he received the first alarm in a telephone call from the hotel at 1:12 a. m., when a man's voice said:

"Chief, you'd better come here with your apparatus. We have a small fire. But don't make too much noise. We don't want to disturb the guests."

REGISTER DESTROYED

Minutes later firemen arrived to find the hotel ablaze, flames shooting from windows and several guests in upper stories screaming for help. The sudden blaze razed the historic landmark—a building which had a front section three stories high and a five-story addition—within three hours as firemen, handicapped by lack of equipment, fought in 20-below temperatures.

Destruction of the hotel register made a check of the 45 guests, mostly transients, difficult.

Police announced this morning that the three unaccounted for had been identified as Fred Blake, Plattsburg, N. Y., a salesman; Miss Kit Bryant, 83, and Mrs. George Holmes, 75, both of St. Albans and both winter residents at the hotel.

Chief Sweeney said the missing "were believed dead." He added it would be impossible to search the smouldering ruins — only part of the front wall remains standing—until tomorrow. The chief reported the fire's cause was undetermined, but that it "warrants investigation." He notified State Fire Marshall Chester Kirby of Rutland.

5 BADLY BURNED

Two hundred men on their way home from a Knights of Columbus 50th anniversary banquet joined Chief Sweeney and his five on-duty firemen in battling the flames. All call firemen were ordered to the scene and all available apparatus and ambulances were sent from neighboring communities.

Of the 11 injured, five were critically burned or smashed in life leaps from upper floors. Names of these five were on the danger list at St. Albans Hospital.

"We had only two ladders, but we managed to get them up and get 25 persons down them to safety. We were lucky," the fire chief said.

Although fire officials estimated the loss at $200,000, real estate men said it would cost nearly $500,000 to replace the building and its furnishings. Walls began falling less than two hours after the flames were discovered.

PEPPER DONNA, 18
Wedding Plans News to Borin

Pepper's Marriage Plans News to Borin

While Pepper Donna, 18, former model and beauty queen, was going ahead with plans for an early wedding in Boston to Nate Borin, 52, wealthy Chicagoan, the surprised Nate told news reporters today that so far as he's concerned "there's nothing to it."

The unperturbed Pepper, when informed of Nate's denial of wedding plans, or even a proposal, exclaimed:

"Why, that's ridiculous! I don't care what he is quoted as saying; we're going to be married as soon as possible. Only last night he told me over the phone from Chicago that he loves me."

Then the beauteous ex-model, Miss Miami Beach of 1947, who is staying at the home of her parents in Auburn st., West End, said she would know positively Sunday or Monday when she and Nate would be altar-bound.

But Nate, in whose apartment in the Windy City his estranged wife, Claire, found some of Miss Donna's clothing when she returned last fall from the West Coast, insisted the anouncement of his forthcoming marriage to the Boston beauty was news to him.

Pepper countered by stating it had all been arranged to take place when his divorce from Claire became final. The final decree was handed down in Chicago earlier this week.

In a telephone interview from his suite in the Stevens Hotel, the wealthy art dealer was emphatic in brushing off the wedding plans as outlined by the insistent Donna.

"Well, she says it's so," a reporter for the Chicago Herald American informed Nate, who came back with the reply, "I ought to be consulted.'

"Have you proposed to her?" Nate was then asked, and he promptly answered "No!"

"This is Leap Year," he was reminded. "Did she propose to you?" again Nate replied, with a laugh, "No."

"I repeat," Nate said, "that as far as I'm concerned, there's nothing to it. You'll excuse me now. I'm in the middle of a bridge game."

Three Boys Confess Thefts of $10,000

In an amazing saga of crime, three Brighton High School students were trapped today in the attic of a Monastery rd., Brighton, home and a short time later led police to between $5000 and $10,000 worth of loot they had secreted in lockers at the school.

The trio, all good students and members of good families, confessed to 13 Brighton breaks and an undisclosed number of others in Brookline.

The youngsters, two of them 17 and the other 15, told police they pursued their studies by day and foraged at night through homes to get jewelry and cash for their girl friends.

Peter J. LeLecas returned to his Monastery rd. home and heard prowlers. He telephoned the Brighton police station and Sgt. Norman Boyd and Patrolmen George Killen and Ray Ward sped to the scene.

With drawn guns, the trio stalked through room after room until they reached the attic. There the three schoolboys gave up with cries of "don't shoot."

At Brighton police station the youngsters faced Capt. William Donovan, who drew from them admissions they entered homes and looted them. They then said much of the loot had been placed in the high school lockers.

Police awakened Anthony DiFrancisci, the school janitor, to uncover an amazing assortment.

Most valuable article recovered was a $1200 diamond ring. A large collection of watches included a diamond wrist watch valued at $500, which belonged to the wife of a policeman.

More than $200 in cash was found in the lockers, and the youths said they had spent large sums in entertaining their girl chums.

All three were to be arraigned today in Brighton juvenile court and then quizzed by Brookline police.

Old Colony 'Normal', New Woes Tie Trains

Trains on the Old Colony Railroad were running on their "normal schedule" this forenoon, that is, operating from five minutes to more than one and a half hours late.

Railroad spokesmen blamed the early morning commuter delay to cold weather, but trainmen explained unofficially that coaches of the Pennsylvania Railroad were being used on one trip and that these cars—added to regular length New Haven trains—were too heavy for the old-style locomotive.

The 7:26 a. m., train out of Hingham for Boston was 10 minutes late leaving Hingham. The train had its regular group of New Haven Railroad coaches in addition to four or five Pennsylvania coaches.

This train stalled at Braintree, tying up all trains on the Greenbush branch and those on the Plymouth, Brockton, Middleboro and Abington branch. It also tied up trains south bound from Boston.

Next, the Diesel shuttle-train, The Comet, broke down in South Braintree when the air brakes failed due, the railroad said, to ice in a cylinder. The train had to be towed to Boston for repairs. Highway buses were put into the shuttle service.

To cap the climax, Train No. 740, Middleboro bound out of Braintree at 7:20 a. m., stalled south of the station when power in the steam locomotive failed. Towing of that engine blocked the tracks, causing further delay.

Fire Destroys Bradford Plant

HAVERHILL, Jan. 30 — The Brauner Chemical, Inc., plant, Railroad ave., Bradford, was destroyed in a $25,000 fire today but nearby homes were saved by the accumulations of snow on roofs which householders had been lamenting—until the fire threatened.

The three-alarm blaze, which firemen battled unsuccessfully from midnight to 6 a. m., produced huge, blazing embers the wind carried to adjacent homes. These burned themselves out on snow-covered roofs.

The plant employed nine persons in the manufacture of machine tools. Fire Chief Benjamin Chase said an investigation would be made by the State fire marshal's office.

"MAMA, COME BACK TO ME"—Heartbroken little George Diehl weeps bitter tears of loneliness in Chicago's St. Vincent Home for Children as he constantly calls for his mother, 19-year-old Mrs. Rosemary Diehl, who deserted him. She left the child in a boarding home and sent a note to her sister, threatening to kill herself rather than go to jail for "running away."

Democrats Hunt Compromise To Salvage Truman Tax Plan

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30 (AP)—Democrats hatched a plan today to use the GOP tax cut bill as the model for a substitute containing a $3,200,000,000 corporation tax.

As a way to save a part of President Truman's own tax program, it looked like a forlorn hope.

The great election year debate entered its second day with Republicans confident their bill, with its $6,500,000,000 in tax reductions, will pass unchanged on Monday. The Republican bill does not provide any new taxes.

Democratic members of the house ways and means committee talked over possible compromises yesterday in Minority Leader Rayburn's office. Another meeting was set for today.

It was reported that one version they considered would:

Impose a new $3,200,000,000 tax on corporations, as proposed by Mr. Truman.

Increase individual exemptions from $500 to $600 (same as Knutson bill).

Apply to all states the community property principle by which married couples may split their income for tax reporting purposes. This holds it at lower tax rates (same as Knutson bill).

Grant percentage cuts ranging from 15 per cent for the lowest incomes to 5 per cent in the upper brackets (compared with Knutson's 30 to 15 per cent).

Anti-Vivisection Units Hail Hearst

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30—Special commendation for his continued fight against vivisection today was accorded William Randolph Hearst by the Voters League to Abolish Vivisection.

A formal resolution, signed by H. P. Garden, league secretary, was passed by the league, which represents 42,000 members, in joint session with the San Francisco Anti-Vivisection Society.

Earlier, the two groups had memorialized Congress to take cognizance of current efforts by the "torture trust" to enact legislation in the 48 states "in order to legalize their strange brand of sadism which they refer to as science."

ICE-LOCKED BARGES FREED

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 30 (AP)—Nine of 12 ice-locked barges in the Ohio river, loaded with new automobiles, were freed today. Three barges remained in the ice.

Temporary Relief Only Seen in Fuel Oil Crisis

Even when all war-requisitioned tankers are returned to private ownership there will still be an oil shortage in the United States, U. S. maritime officials warned today.

This statement came immediately after announcement that 40 Navy tankers were rushing additional oil supplies to New England under an emergency program.

The 40 tankers are being assembled at Balboa, Panama Canal Zone. From there they will be routed to strategic oil ports, and thence to Atlantic seaboard distribution points.

Though the fuel oil situation is critical, State Fuel Co-ordinator George H. Rockwell announced today the position of kerosene stocks is much worse.

Rockwell said some drastic action would be required to provide this widely used range oil. As things are at present, he said, supplies will simply not meet the demand during the first 10 days of next month, and the outlook is very bleak indeed.

Pointing out there has been a 6 per cent drop in kerosene supply since a week ago, Rockwell urged all kerosene users to adopt every possible conservation measure.

In Rhode Island, Gov. John O. Pastore stepped into the kerosene shortage and appealed to dealers "in the name of humanity" to disregard quotas and supply consumers.

Answering the appeal, several large distributors promised they would dip into February reserves at once.

Girl Piano Prodigy To Be Sent Home

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 30 (AP) — Jacqueline Horner, 15-year-old runaway from Hollywood prominence and piano exercises, has been made a ward of the juvenile court.

The pretty piano prodigy will be returned to her mother, Mrs. Clara Horner, under jurisdiction of Los Angeles juvenile authorities.

The decision was made over Jacqueline's vehement objections. "I don't want to go back to any more work," the girl said. "I just want to be normal like any other girl of my age."

She was found in San Francisco Jan. 21 after an eight-day search. Police located Jackie in a hotel room with Wallace Wells, 19, of Hood River, Ore., a Navy seaman. The two told authorities they had done nothing wrong. Investigators agreed.

Actor Dana Andrews Dad of New Baby Girl

BURBANK, Cal., Jan. 30 (AP) —Susan Andrews is the 8-pound, 10-ounce new member of the family of film actor Dana Andrews. The baby was born to Mrs. Andrews in St. Joseph's Hospital where attendants said mother and child were doing nicely. The Andrews have a daughter, Cathy, 5, and a son, Stephen, 3; and Andrews has a son, David, 14, by a previous marriage.

OLD AGE COST SOARS

Old Age Assistance payments in Boston this year will reach $7,000,000, an approximate increase of $1,000,000 over last year, Mayor Curley disclosed today. He reported there are now nearly 1300 more persons on the rolls than at the beginning of 1947.

Prominent on the list are Drs. Sidney Burwell of Harvard, James M. Faulkner of Boston University and Dwight O'Hara of Tufts College. Among the lay members are Judge Charles E. Wyzanski, Jr., Ben Ames Williams, Edward French, Ernest M. Hopkins and Charles E. Cotting.

Purpose of the drive is to provide funds for research in diseases of the heart, which take a greater toll of life than any other known cause.

Party Leaders Will Lash Absentee House Members

Members of the Massachusetts House, Republican and Democratic, have been summoned by their respective leaders to attend party caucuses at the State House, Monday at 2 p. m., at which they will be bluntly warned that further absenteeism from sessions will not be tolerated.

House Speaker Frederick B. Willis (R.) and Democratic Floor Leader Thomas P. O'Neill, Jr., issued a joint statement after the absence of members had blocked action on the issue of old age assistance, declaring that members will be told they must attend all sessions unless it is absolutely impossible.

Speaker Willis was so incensed when he found Democrats almost in command of legislation while he was holding an emergency committee meeting that he cancelled the four-day week for legislators and served notice that, beginning next week, House members will be forced to attend sessions five days a week.

The House had revived two old-age measures it had killed earlier but delayed action on them when absenteeism of members became an issue. In a roll call vote, only 158 of the 240 legislators were in attendance.

Speaker Willis said there had been several instances during the week when the total vote was below 100.

Motherhood Hope Offered In Blood Test Experiments

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (AP)—A blood test that may help prevent miscarriages in early pregnancy was reported today by four Yale scientists.

They presented evidence that a lack of iodine in the blood may cause many women to lose their babies then. The test can detect this lack, and miscarriages may be prevented by giving thyroid products.

So far, however, the evidence for this still is incomplete. Dr. John P. Peters, professor of medicine, told a special conference on problems of pregnancy. The work was done by Drs. Evelyn B. Man, Martin Heinemann, Carl E. Johnson and Dr. Peters.

The iodine is a special kind which is found attached to proteins in the blood. Most or all of this iodine is apparently contained in the active thyroid hormone, thyroxine.

Non-pregnant women normally have a certain amount of the iodine. When they become pregnant, the amount rises quickly and sharply. This increase is found as soon as pregnancy can be detected. It stays at that level until the birth of the baby, then falls again to the former amount.

The Yale researchers observed that in many cases where the increase failed to show up, miscarriages have occurred early in the pregnancies. Its failure to rise may therefore be a sign of threatened miscarriage.

They gave the thyroid products to women who failed to show the increase, and these women did not have any miscarriages. A few other women who had had miscarriages carried their babies successfully when they received the hormone.

The low amount of iodine Dr. Peters stressed, is not the only cause of miscarriage. Also, in the later months of pregnancy, a lower level of iodine apparently is not any obstacle to successful pregnancy.

House Pink Probe Summons Mussolini Mistress, Spy Ring

By WILLIAM P. FLYTHE
Boston American Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—In Los Angeles or nearby, a beautiful Italian woman, said to be a former mistress of Benito Mussolini, was to be served with a subpoena to tell Congress how she got into the U. S. She is said to be connected with motion pictures.

At other points subpoenas were to be handed to at least two internationally known Communists, a former Nazi spy and three or four Old World criminals illegally enjoying American hospitality.

Their names will be kept secret until they are actually on the way to appear before the House un-American activities committee which has begun a sweeping inquiry into charges of gross laxity on the part of immigration authorities.

Rep. McDowell (R.) of Pennsylvania, chairman of a sub-committee conducting the preliminary probe, said the first of the fugitives probably wohld be questioned today.

He held a long secret meeting with John Bankhead, American consul at Windsor, Ont.

"He told us that while he declined to issue visas at his Canadian post, the immigration people passed known criminals across the line into Detroit," Rep. McDowell stated.

"I have hundreds of names of the most repulsive criminals of the underworld of Europe who have been admitted to this country.

"This is just part of the 80,000 such characters. It does not include political refugees who managed to get in without passports, but only the criminals."

ATOM SPY INCLUDED

The woman alleged to be the former mistress of Mussolini was first the mistress of his son Bruno, killed while in the Italian air service, Rep. McDowell stated. Upon his death the Nazi dictator took her as a favorite, the committee understands. In some mysterious manner she got into the U. S.

One Communist is believed to be a spy and member of the ring seeking America's atomic secret.

Duke of Aosta, Italian Noble, Dies

BUENOS AIRES Jan 30 (INS)—The exiled Duke of Aosta, 47, second cousin of the late King Victor Emmanuel III of Italy, died in his Lancaster Hotel suite.

Death of the duke, who had been ill since the recent death of the former king in Egypt, was attributed by his physicians to a collapse.

Italian embassy officials and Argentine government representatives conferred on funeral plans and notification of the duke's family.

Summer Camp For Children Wins Support

Many deserving Roxbury youngsters can look forward to the joy of a summer camp vacation this year through the efforts of the Brotherhood of Temple Mishkan Tefila, Roxbury.

Morris Palais

President of the Brotherhood, Morris Palais, announced today that the drive for funds was receiving excellent support and many prominent citizens had endorsed the campaign.

The drive would end, he said, May 26 with an entertainment highlighted by the awarding of a 1948 Oldsmobile and many other valuable gifts.

The underprivileged children, under the Brotherhood's scheme, are sent to camp provided with all the necessary clothing and personal effects. Private camps are also chosen in order that the needy youngsters will not feel a stigma of charity is attached.

General chairman of the drive is Samuel Feldberg, assisted by committee heads, Morris Spellogel, Samuel Sparks, Samuel Rosoff and Lester Richman.

Girl Burns House To Please Mother

FERNDALE, Md., Jan. 30 (AP) — A girl of 10 testified she set fire to a neighbor's home three times "to please my mother."

Louise Morrison said that after the house burned to the ground last June and was rebuilt, she set fire to the back porch in October, then to the front porch in November.

"Mother asked me if I could do it," Louise said in police court.

Her foster mother, Mrs. Helen Josephine Lock, 42, was ordered held in $15,000 bail for grand jury action on three charges of arson.

The girl said her mother asked her to burn a seven-room bungalow owned by Mrs. Rose Sellner who said she and the Locks had argued over a garage Mrs. Lock's husband wanted to build across the street from the Sellner bungalow.

Anthony and Cleo In New Light as History Quiz

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (AP) — Parents of New York city high school students have protested that a recent history exam was too tough. But School Supt. William A. Hamm said students were given the benefit of the doubt if they gave any sort of reasonable answers.

For instance, if they were asked to name "two ancient sports," and replied "Antony and Cleopatra," they got full credit.

March of Dimes Ball Ends Drive

The 1948 March of Dimes campaign here wound up with 22,000 persons attending the annual ball at Boston Garden and 250 others sitting down to a $100-a-plate dinner at the Hotel Somerset.

National Chairman Basil O'Connor told the dinner gathering that infantile paralysis can and will be conquered. He revealed that the national foundation has spent $35,000,000 for care of 88,000 afflicted in the last 10 years.

Local officials announced that even though the campaign officially is over, mail contributions will be welcome at headquarters, 209 Massachusetts ave., Back Bay.

Woe Upon Woe For Car Owner

BALTIMORE, Jan. 30 (AP)—Eugene Sullivan spent an hour digging his new club convertible out of a snow bank and was driving home when another automobile skidded in his direction.

He pulled into another snow bank—but not fast enough to prevent his left rear fender from being nicked. He walked three blocks to his home for a shovel.

Before he got back, a second car skidded at the same spot. This time, both the left rear fender and the door were hit.

Sullivan started to shovel but not fast enough. Two more autos hit the slick spot and piled into the new convertible.

Have Fun With Kids---

But Never Swipe Freckles

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (AP)—Where can you buy a freckle? I need one bad. I'm in a jam.

If I don't find one soon a little girl is going to be mad at me. She said I took it and haven't brought it back.

Other people's kids—they get me in more odd predicaments. But I don't have any children of my own, so I have to play with those that belong to other people.

Children do for me what music, books, movies, golf or gambling does for many grownups—that is, they lift me out of the world of worry and the gih cost of living.

Someday it will be a penitentiary offense to put a rein on the fancies of children, who are born poets and die—well, something less than poets.

HEAVEN OUTMODED

I am in bad standing now at one household which has a small boy who wants to become another Thomas Edison. This young mechanical genius asked me about Heaven, and I did my best to explain to him all about this place where I hope some day to get my mail. I answered all his questions with the latest information I have.

But the other day his father approached me bitterly:

"What ideas are you putting in my son's head anyway? He has informed his mother he never wants to go to Heaven because it doesn't have an escalator. He says he would rather go to a department store."

HALF A DACHSHUND

The only deal with the younger generation I have come out ahead on recently concerns the purchase of a dog by two children of some friends in Indianapolis. The kids earned the money themselves. But I made a small contribution to the fund, and another friend later put in some, too.

The kids bought a dachshund. It was so long they decided it needed two names. So they named the front end "Hal" for me, and generously named the back half "Charley" in honor of the last contributor.

IN 1,000,000

Now about that freckle. I playfully pretended to pluck it off the nose of this five-year-old girl after a visit a month ago.

Last week I called again, and she crept up behind me and whispered in my ear:

"Please, I want my freckle back. I think it is lonesome for me."

"I am taking awfully good care of it," I replied.

"Do you take it out for a walk every day on a leash?" She asked.

Somewhat flabbergasted at the mental picture of a freckle out for a stroll, I hemmed and hawed, and she said very solemnly:

"I really do want my freckle back. Please mail it to me this week, and don't forget."

What happens now? The only thing I can think of is to tell her the freckle changed into a chocolate bar and mail her one.

But this could start a game that would put me in the poorhouse. She has about 1,265,347 freckles now—and growing more every day the sun shines.

16 More U. S. Officers Join Greeks as Advisors

ATHENS, Jan. 30 (INS)—Maj. Gen. William G. Livesay, chief of the U. S. Military Mission to Athens, announced 16 more American officers have joined Greek troops in northern Greece as advisors.

Gen. Livesay also announced that American aid to Greece up to the end of 1947 exceeded $100,000,000.

Witnesses Back Dancer in Housekeeper Claim

NEW BEDFORD, Jan. 30—Defense witnesses were called today to support the contention that Mrs. Norma J. Gormley, 26, a professional dancer was acting only in the role of housekeeper in the Broadway, New York, apartment where she lived.

Mrs. Gormley is contesting a guardianship petition brought here in probate court by Mr. and Mrs. Warren Harshon of Carroll st. who have been caring for the dancer's daughter Camille, 3.

The latter was boarded out to the Harshons when Mrs. Gormley was appearing professionally in New Bedford.

Further Mrs. Pearl E. Baker of South Sixth st. testified Mrs. Gormley told her she was "the friend" of a Mr. Paddock, owner of the apartment house in which the dancer claims she acted as housekeeper.

Private detectives have testified they visited the Broadway apartment early in the morning and could find no evidence of wrongdoing.

It was then that George Ponte, attorney for Mrs. Gormley, said he had witnesses who could prove the dancer was acting as housekeeper for two men who had the apartment.

Russia Charges U. S. Violated Italian Treaty

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP)—The Moscow radio said today that Russia has formally charged the U. S. with violating the Italian peace treaty by sending warships to Italian ports.

The broadcast said Alexander S. Panyushkin, Soviet ambassador to Washington, had sent a protest note to State Secretary Marshall.

City Sells Tax-Default Land at $6000 Profit

Sale by the city at public auction of 24 parcels of foreclosed property, consisting mostly of vacant land assessed at $41,000 for $47,670 was announced today by Irving Lewis chairman of the board of real estate commissioners.

Revenue from the sale was about $6000 more than was due for defaulted taxes, Lewis reported.

Storm-Battered Cutter Reports All Aboard Well

Capt. Charles Connick of Watertown, Trans-World Airline pilot has received word from Capt. Carl Guisness, skipper of the storm-battered Coast Guard cutter Duane, on weather station duty in the North Atlantic that all aboard were well, although the seas were the roughest they had ever experienced.

Connick said 80-foot waves were plainly visible to passengers flying over the Duane at 8500 feet.

Leader of India's Millions Slain

Gandhi in Prayer in Saluting Gathering of 100,000 in March, 1946

Appeal

Speaking at New Delhi, Gandhi calls for the end of factional strife that caused the slaughter of thousands of Moslems and Hindus since the inauguration of the two states of Pakistan and the Dominion of India . . . this in October, 1947.

Cold Job

The "New Look" in horse blankets helped to keep the shivers out of 'old Dobbin's withers today while he stood outdoors in the market district waiting for wagon to be loaded. Newest cold spell is the worst of the season thus far.

A THREAT OF DISASTER

A SHUTDOWN of gas in 350,000 homes, hospitals, hotels and State institutions would be a disastrous blow to the community.

There is grave danger it will happen, and happen quickly, unless the workers of the Eastern Fuel & Gas Associates and the company executives reach an agreement on a wage scale by midnight tonight.

There are between 900 and 1000 workers involved, members of a CIO union. They are engaged in the production of illuminating gas which is serviced through Boston Consolidated, Arlington Gas and Old Colony Gas in 34 cities and towns.

This gas flows through 350,000 meters into homes, hospitals, hotels, state institutions, used for heating, for cooking, for refrigeration, for sterilization by upwards of one million persons.

As we understand it, only a matter of a few cents an hour separates the workers and the company. Both the union and the company owe it to the public to settle this dispute by arbitration without permitting a strike.

If they do not do so, and if there is indication they cannot do so and avert a walkout, Gov. Bradford has no alternative except State seizure of the plant under the Slichter law and State operation of the plant until the differences are settled.

This is a drastic step but one fully justified in that the safety, health and general welfare of one million persons are dependent upon it.

We can't believe that either the union or the company wants to see this come to pass, and certainly Gov. Bradford doesn't wish it.

But if, in the emergency, the State does make the seizure, the public will expect the workers to abide by the law and remain on their jobs until a satisfactory adjustment of differences is reached.

PATRIOTIC DUTY

EIGHTEEN STATES have now ratified a pending amendment to the Constitution of the United States which would restrict all future Presidents to two terms in office. Favorable action by 36 States is necessary to make the amendment operative.

The half-way mark will be passed when the New York Legislature—following the recommendation of Gov. Thomas E. Dewey, as undoubtedly it will do—becomes the 19th State to affirm the wisdom of Congress in proposing this vital safeguard of our republican form of representative government.

A century and a half of history lies behind the reform. Proposals were offered in the Constitutional Convention in 1787 to impose a limitation upon presidential tenure. The conclusion of the founding fathers was to make none, because they in their devoted patriotism could not believe that any American, honored with so august an office, would put personal or partisan advantage above the public welfare, or that the people would countenance so over-weening an ambition.

Nontheless, in the absence of a constitutional prohibition, the danger was recognized, and a long list of illustrious Presidents not only spurned third-term aspirations for themselves, but warned the nation of the sinister possibility involved. Thus the "no-third-term" tradition became a recognized part of our democratic heritage.

And yet there came a time when, under seemingly great stresses, the tradition was violated. The people were induced to believe that a third term—and even a fourth term—had been made mandatory by "unprecedented" circumstances.

But now, looking backward across only a short span of time, the people perceive that their trepidation was groundless and that they had been made the victims of a political illusion. Likewise they have become aware of the fact that they had laid a precedent for the actual overthrow of the Republic.

Accordingly, a penitential Congress adopted the pending resolution, and the sovereign States are now seconding the congressional leadership.

State action should be UNANIMOUS.

Do you remember when you heard
My lips breathe love's first faltering word?
You do, sweet, dont you?
When having wandered all the day
Linked arm in arm I dared to say,
"You'll love me—won't you?"
—THOMAS HAYNES BAYLY.

NO DOUBT you recall the day when you first expressed undying affection for the charming young woman who became your wife. But where did this touching scene take place? According to the most recent statistics, the words, "I love you" are most often voiced in parked automobiles. Seems natural. In the days beyond recall these three little words were most voiced on buggy rides.

ASKING: Queries from clients: Q—What heavyweight boxing champion starred in a play by Bernard Shaw? Answer by return mail or forward a Wheeling stogie. A—Easy question. Jim Corbett was starred in Shaw's play, "Cashel Byron's Profession." Q—When Princess Elizabeth and Mountbatten were married, did they say "I will" or "I do?" A—I will.

Princess Elizabeth

FOOD BARGAIN: Am informed by a Los Angeles subscriber a restaurant in his city offers for $1.25 a meal consisting of a charcoal broiled top-sirloin steak, large baked potato, two fresh vegetables and French fried onions. Appears to be quite a bargain. Wonder what the current price is of a good steak dinner in Kansas City, Mo.?

LONGEVITY: How would you like to live to be 90 and still be able to play 18 holes of golf on Sunday? Maybe you can do it. Recently formed are several organizations designed to do research on longevity and advise people how to achieve it. But, of course, this is not a new idea. In 1929, in San Francisco, Dr. Lillien Martin organized the Old Age Counselling Service. This service specialized in advice on achieving longevity. The founder, Dr. Martin, lived to be 91. She considered an active mind one of the principal aids to longevity. If that's true I should live to be at least 300 years old. My mind is kept so active knocking out seven columns a week, reading the racing form and trying to understand women, that I can hardly stand it.

OVER THERE: The Krupp mansion in the Ruhr, occupied recently by Alfred Krupp von Bohen und Halbach, has 800 rooms! It includes an art gallery with paintings valued at $36,000,000. To staff this place Alfred Krupp, last head of the munitions plant, had 300 servants, all men. This Krupp had no use for women, children and dogs. He is said to have been worth nearly $200,000,000.

ASIDES: Now available is a gadget which will make a cup of coffee and boil an egg at the same time in three minutes. I like my eggs boiled four minutes . . . The life of a bartender is more dangerous than that of a man engaged in working with dynamite. Such is the belief of insurance companies whose rates are higher for barkeepers than dynamite workers.

THOSE FRANCS: So the French franc is now pegged at 214 to the dollar. In Paris in the summer of 1939, I received 33 francs for each of my hard-earned dollars. In the latter part of August just before the war started, I received 42 francs per dollar. But in those days you could get an excellent meal in Paris for 35 francs. For 10 francs you could get coffee and cognac at Fouquet's sidewalk cafe, on the Champs Elysee, and sit there all night if you wanted.

DRAMA SCHOOLS: Sweden's Royal Dramatic Academy, established in 1921 ,has been referred to as "the world's greatest school of acting." I question that claim. It is true Greta Garbo and Ingrid Bergman attended this institution. I rise to ask, however, what male graduates of the Swedish Royal Dramatic Academy have achieved noteworthy distinction on stage or screen?

PASSING BY: Clem McCarthy, King of turf experts. Also dean of barber shop tenors. For his singing in the bathtub program the coming week, Mr. McCarthy has selected a medley of railroad songs, such as "The Wreck of The Old Ninety-Seven," "In the Baggage Car Ahead," "The Charming Young Widow I Met on the Train," and "There's a Red Light on the Track for Susie Brown." Next week his program will be all of automobile songs, such as "Get Out and Get Under," "My Merry Old-mobile," etc., et.

Bob Feller, Baseball pitching genius. To be paid an $87,000-a-year salary by the Cleveland club the coming season. When that great Chicago Cub pitcher "Three Fingered" Mordecai Brown was at his peak his salary was $3000 a year. And when Brown asked for a raise to $3500 a year he was suspended for insubordination.

THESE DAYS

THE NEW YORK HERALD-TRIBUNE, inspired by Bartley C. Crum of San Francisco, gave William Z. Foster, leader of the Communist party, about 12 columns of space during a period of newsprint shortage to state the position of the American Communist Party in reply to a long series of questions prepared by the newspaper.

William Z. Foster

No opponent of Communism, no spokesman for the Republican or Democratic parties, for the National Ass'n of Manufacturers or any other American group, has been given similar space to set forth the American point of view in response to Foster.

Foster was permitted to set forth, without contradiction or correction in similar news columns, anything he had in mind, true or false. I have been waiting for the New York Herald-Tribune to call upon some American to answer Foster, but nearly a month has passed and nothing has happened.

Foster says that the Communists uphold the American Constitution but adds the following:

"Under present political conditions in this country the United States constitution requires many vital democratic amendments, including provisions to guarantee the full rights of the Negro people, the right to work, the right to social security, the specific right of trade-union organization, the outlawing of anti-Semitism, special rights for women and children, the unequivocal right to vote, more complete separations of State and church, the provision of more democratic methods of constitutional amendment, the abolition of the present conservative and paralyzing system of government by checks and balances, etc."

OBVIOUSLY, HE WOULD DESTROY our form of government, which is what he calls the "paralyzing system of government by checks and balances," the essence of the above quoted paragraph.

He would, in preference, adopt the Soviet constitution, as can be noted by comparing his language with the Soviet constitution. Undoubtedly, he agrees with Leon Josephson who once wrote in The Communist:

"The new Soviet constitution and electoral law are the most democratic in the world. A simple comparison of the new Soviet constitution and the electoral law with the American constitution and electoral laws of any other country, conclusively proves the correctness of this statement."

Foster also said in the Herald-Tribune article:

"The ruling class of monopoly capitalists, who dictate our nation's economics, politics and culture, are impressing upon our people a conception of loyalty which calls for not loyalty to the nation but loyalty to the capitalist system, to their so-called free enterprise and to all the reactionary war policies that go with it..."

THAT IS OBVIOUSLY UNTRUE, but no correction was made either in the article from which I quote or in any subsequent discussion. A person, noting the space—more than one and a half pages devoted to spreading Communism before the nation—might even believe that the newspaper gives such prominence to these views because it supports them.

Not a word appears in the introductory material to indicate a different view. In fact, Mr. Crum makes this point:

". . . If we get an unequivocal statement of the position of the Communist Party, we may be able to lessen the current hysteria to the point where we can once more have rational discussions of the issues we face."

In other words, the Communists are not to be judged by their history, their philosophy, their deeds, their acts, their activities but by what Foster happens to be willing to say and therefore about 12 columns are given him to smear, attack, vilify and lie—without refutation or rebuttal. So Foster says:

". . . DURING THE WAR all over Europe the big monopolists shamelessly peddled their countries' independence to Hitler, while the Communists and other patriots fought and died in the underground and on the battlefields to defend their countries . . . "

And that goes unchallenged in spite of the Stalin-Hitler alliance, the rape of Finland, Esthonia, Latvia and Poland, the breach of agreements concerning Poland, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Rumania, the theft of Manchuria, the betrayal of a united Germany and all else.

This is a very curious business and I still cannot understand why the New York Herald-Tribune permitted Foster to use about 12 columns for such falsehood, without reply or denunciation in similarly prominent space.

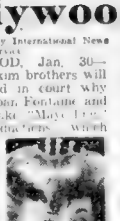
HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 30—The Hakim brothers will be asked in court why they tied up Joan Fontaine and then didn't make "Mayerling" with Rampart Productions which made the deal for Joan, in suing the Hakims for keeping her from appearing in other pictures.



Joan Fontaine

William Dozier, president of Rampart, said today when I asked him if it were true that the Hakims had been served with papers, "it is true they have received a letter from our lawyer. They have held up Joan from Dec. 1, 1947, to Jan. 15, 1948, and she was unable to make a contract to do any other picture because of her commitment for 'Mayerling.' The picture was called off through no fault of hers. She was ready to go to work."

IT'S SAID BY OTHERS that the Hakims were unable to get the money they expected. However, Rampart Productions will say they should not have made any deal without getting backing first.

I WOULD SAY the combination of Bill Burnett and Frank Cavitt is ope to command our attention. Bill wrote "Little Caesar," "High Sierra" and other best sellers, and Frank won an Oscar for his screenplay on "Going My Way."

These two writers have decided not to sit idly by until conditions become even worse. They have written an original, "World on a String," which they will produce independently.

They were offered $200,000 for their melodrama, an original with music and featuring a swing musician, but the boys thought—"If it's that good, why not make it ourselves?" So that is just what they are going to do.

LAURENCE OLIVIER and Vivien Leigh will very likely call off their Australian tour at the last moment. There is a todo going on with the Actors Society in Australia which corresponds to our Equity.

The Actors' Society insists Olivier and Leigh bring only their most important co-actors and that all other parts be filled by local Australian players. This would limit them to a company of about six.

Olivier, who personally coaches and trains each of his players in his privately-owned company, doesn't like this and doesn't see it "as a great big way."

CORINNE CALVAY, the French actress who has been in Hollywood over a year without ever having made a picture, was hurt in a car accident Sunday night. Her car was demolished and she was rushed to the hospital, where stitches were taken. She is being new but still suffering from shock.

Miss Calvay has said when her contract with Paramount is up she is going back to France with Tino Rossi as her good idea. What a foolish girl Miss Calvay is not to take advantage of the opportunity offered her by the American Film Co. and many work as most of these other foreign actresses do.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: I believe the Helen Walker - Lucky Humberstone marital affairs are off. Helen was having dinner with Bernard Strauss, New York producer, at Cezar's Supper Club, and she's been stepping out with other persons lately.

I had an interesting letter from Alice Sherman, associate editor of Cosmopolitan Magazine. She writes that she had dinner with Lloyd Douglas in Las Vegas and had the rare pleasure of reading the finished portion of "The Big Fisherman."

Alice says simultaneously with the publishing of his book he is going to run an article. She says it's a magnificent book and the kind the world is waiting for.

Douglas stated some time ago he didn't want to have it made into a motion picture but certainly a picture of that kind could do much good now. I hope he will change his mind.

It's or isn't Terry Moore going to marry Bert West, UCLA football player? The story came to me but straight.

Now Terry is saying that all her other dates are staying away since the story came out, and that she's not going to marry Bert. Can it be she feels her career is in the way? Looks to me as if that's the reason.

Personally I don't see that it's going to rock the nation what her age is or isn't—but I'm a little weary of all the telephone calls.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random. Mrs. Dana Andrews is already on the potential awarding the light of the Perry and Dana Gas from here since the moment . . . Joel Reed is paying court to Patrice Munsel, the glamorous opera singer. He took her to Pat Smart's party. The next night he listened to her sing from the walks of the Philharmonic and then escorted her to supper.

Jack Oakie and Victoria Horne seem happy at Charley Foy's. I suppose as gossips have to record.

Jed Wertz, Sokare extremely well, having dinner at the Somerset House with Jane Hallingsworth. Jed has put on a little weight and it's highly becoming.

Reggie and Nadia Gardner leave for New York Feb. 12 for a month of plays and vacation. Reggie won't [illegible] cut his hair. He had to let it grow long for his last picture.

The Rex Harrisons planed in yesterday. Their son and his nurse follow on the train.

Kay Kyser's sponsors and network are giving him a big dinner Feb. 22 at the Beverly Hills Hotel to celebrate his 10th anniversary on the same stage. I don't know anyone who deserves it more than Kay who is doing marvelous work to help build the wing for St. Jude's Hospital.

Jean Darnell, wife of the director, will arrive in Hollywood in about two weeks. He'll visit here before going to Haiti to direct a picture for Alexander Korda.

Dennis Day and his pretty bride having a quiet supper together last night before the wedding.

Joe Markowitz is back from Portland 20 pounds lighter and very becoming. He was there to make "Escape" for 20th.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 30—After all these years a member of Congress has discovered an effective way to checkmate and defeat a lobbyist.

This tremendous discovery, which may cause him to go down in history with Robert Fulton and Amerigo Vespucci, has been made by Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy, whose only previous discovery of note was that you don't have to be named LaFollette to be a Senator from Wisconsin.

The 38-year-old solon is strong for the St. Lawrence waterways project and is doing all in his power to offset its opponents.

The other day he received a phone call from Frank McCarthy (positively no kith nor kin) who is—er—um—well—legislative consultant for the Pennsylvania railroad. The P. R. R., like most carriers, is energetically opposed to opening the Great Lakes to ocean traffic.

Lobbyist—I mean legislative consultant—McCarthy said, in a rather hesitant manner, that he would like to talk to Sen. McCarthy about the St. Lawrence project. It was evident he expected a cold turndown.

"Come right up, Frank!" bubbled the Senator. "I'd be delighted to see you!"

The astounded lobbyist arrived shortly thereafter and for two and a half hours arrayed all his best arguments against the project. The Senator kept encouraging him to continue.

"You certainly are persuasive Frank," beamed the solon when the lobbyist finally ran down. "I'm very glad I had you up here."

"Then I've convinced you?—you see the evils of this project and will vote against it?"

"Oh, no," chuckled Sen. McCarthy. "I just got you to come up here to waste your time."

"What do you mean waste my time?"

"Well, Frank, I'd rather not spend the afternoon with someone like me who has definitely made up his mind, than with some undecided Senator whose vote you might influence."

I won't repeat what lobbyist McCarthy said as he strode wrathfully from Sen. McCarthy's office but it's something I don't think you should call a Senator.

WIVES AND SWEETHEARTS of industrialists who are driving around in limousines, title to which is held by the gentleman's corporation for tax purposes, may find themselves in secret sympathy with a winsome young matron of our town.

On Christmas Day Lawrence Wood (Chip) Robert, former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee, presented his ever-loving missus, Evie, with one of the most expensive limousines on the market. After the lovey-doveys and "How darling of you, Chip" were over, Mr. Robert suggested offhandedly that his wife turn in her roadster as she would have no use for two cars.

Mrs. Robert grew thoughtful at this. Finally she said, "Chip, don't you put a bill of sale with these cars? Where's the piece of paper showing I own it?"

Mr. Robert attempted to brush this aside but his helpmeet wasn't having any of this. Finally he admitted that what of title was held by his construction company.

"And if I get killed," Mrs. Robert breathing more fire than an overstocked dragon, "I'll be I can say roadster. And I'm not going to let for any limousine your company can take away the first time you get mad at me!"

The other day Mrs. Robert called up a friend. She was obviously hugging herself with glee.

"You know that limousine Chip tried to palm off on me at Christmas?" she burbled. "Well, the screamingest thing happened. When I wouldn't touch it he put it in a garage and the garage wasn't heated. It froze up in the cold spell last night and the engine is all cracked and everything. Isn't that wonderful?" fast against the advice of his physicians. He went without food for five days.

34 Gandhi

The effects of his gesture became noticeable at once. Peace, however uneasy, settled over New Delhi. Two days later, Jan. 21, the bomb exploded near Birla house.

Gandhi asked police to be lenient with the young Hindu who threw it.

"He should not harbor hatred," he said. "I will request the police not to trouble him but to have compassion toward him and make him see the righteous path."

Even as he spoke, the Hindu spiritual leader was too weak to walk from the effects of his long fast. He had been carried to that prayer meeting on a chair.

ESPOUSED UNTOUCHABLES

At one of his last prayer meetings a listener asked Gandhi to proclaim himself a reincarnation of God. Gandhi laughed. The speaker persisted and Gandhi, becoming impatient, told him to sit down and be quiet.

Gandhi, born to the upper Hindu caste, espoused the cause of the Untouchables in latter years. Educated as a lawyer in London, he organized his first civil disobedience campaigns among Indians in South Africa early in the century. He returned to India in 1913 and became recognized leader of the Nationalists in 1925.

He attracted world attention in 1930 by leading 70 volunteers on a march from Ahmadabad to Dandi on the Gulf of Cambay to make salt illegally, in a protest against the British salt tax.

A victim of violence, Gandhi throughout his life urged his followers to campaigns of nonviolence, even when the Japanese threatened and actually invaded India. His brushes with the British caused him to spend a total of 12 years in prisons.

WIFE DIED IN 1944

"I always get the best bargains from behind prison bars," he once said.

The British treated him with increasing benevolence through the years but as late as 1942, the British Secretary of State for India, L. S. Amery, declared him an "arch saboteur" because of a civil disobedience campaign he engineered while Japanese forces were in Burma as the door of India.

Gandhi's wife died in February of 1944 while she and Gandhi were confined by the British in the palace of the Aga Khan. They were married at the ages of 13 and lived together 61 years. After the birth of her fourth son, she and Gandhi lived together as brother and sister, at his suggestion.

Gandhi had laid down a seven-point program as a formula for peace in India his terms for sparing his own life through ending his fast.

He required that Hindus should fraternize with Moslems on the next Mohammedan festival, as in the old days. He asked that mosques which had been converted into Hindu temples or dwelling places be returned to their original uses.

LEADERS FEARED HIS DEATH

He recommended that Moslems be made to feel as safe as they had before India's bloody riots; that those Moslems who fled to Pakistan be invited to return; that Moslems be guaranteed safety aboard trains. He asked that social boycotts of Moslems be abandoned, and that Moslems be given the right to live wherever they chose.

When he ended the fast, Gandhi said he was convinced that a pledge of harmony given him by Indian religious leaders would set the country back on the road to peace.

Indian leaders had expressed fear that Gandhi's death would mean a bloodbath throughout the continent.

But the Mahatma said when he ended his fast that fulfilment of the pledge for peace would double "my intense wish to live a full span of life doing service to humanity . . . at least 125 years or, as some say, 133 years."

COMMUNAL RIOTING

The communal leaders in New Delhi adopted Gandhi's program and set up a committee of 130 of all religions to meet nightly and review the progress toward Gandhi's aims.

An associate said Gandhi had intended to go to Pakistan and attempt to apply his principle of "truth and nonviolence" in India's sister dominion.

The two dominions, created last Aug. 15, have been rent by communial rioting fatal to many thousands and have been at swords' points over the state of Kashmir, which, although predominantly Moslem, was acceded by its Hindu maharajah to India.

WAR PROBLEMS

A few hours after Britain declared war in September, 1939, the Viceroy of India declared India also a belligerent, without consulting any representatives of the people. The Indian Congress party, while condemning "German aggression," also condemned Britain for its "autocratic measures" and demanded a declaration of the war aims.

Gandhi and the viceroy conducted negotiations but they got nowhere. The Congress party later demanded complete independence but Gandhi, as usual, took a conciliatory position. Sir Stafford Cripps of the British war cabinet visited India and held a series of negotiations with various leaders, but his mission did not bring satisfactory results.

Gandhi's attitude toward India's military resistance to Japan caused uneasiness in British quarters and he was termed an appeaser and saboteur. Eventually, he was made a prisoner, not in an ordinary jail, but in a palace.

Attlee Plans Broadcast to India Tonight

LONDON, Jan. 30 (AP)—Prime Minister Attlee is expected to appeal to night to Indian and Pakistan to bury their differences in the crisis caused by the assassination of Mohandas K. Ghandi.

Attlee will broadcast a tribute to Ghandi shortly after 9 p. m. (4 p. m. E. S. T.).

A government official said almost anything might happen in India because of the shooting. The official, who spent many years in British service in India, said authorities there would have to move fast to keep the situation in hand.

MOSLEMS SHOCKED

"Thank God the assassin was not a Moslem, or all hell certainly would break loose," he said.

Indians and Britons alike in England were shocked Moslems, as well as Hindus, paid tribute.

Habib Ibrahim Rahimtolla, Moslem high commissioner in London for the Pakistan government, called personally on Krishna Menon, Indian high commissioner, "to give him my personal condolences."

Gandhi's portrait was hung in the domed library of India House. The 400 staff workers there stopped work until Monday.

Obituary

after long correspondence with Lord Linlithgow, in which the then British Viceroy advised against it for reasons of health.

"POLITICAL BLACKMAIL"

He was then 73 years old and had been feeble with cardiac trouble and high blood pressure. Lord Linlithgow frankly characterized his action as "political blackmail for which there can be no moral justification."

Gandhi, however, went ahead with the joint objective of compelling the government to alter its policy of locking up members of the All-India Congress party for the duration of the war and in protest against the "Jeonine violence" which he accused the government of using to suppress the civil disobedience campaign.

As the days of the fast lengthened, the emaciated leader grew weaker from the lack of food and his condition several times caused alarm.

But the British Government, which had been irritated at Gandhi's attitude in the war, did not weaken and the fast finally ended with no apparent impairment of his health.

February is the month to...

consider your cough

When does a cough deserve attention? A chronic cough can be a perplexing thing. Sometimes it's of no importance. Sometimes it's a symptom of a disease which should be promptly recognized and treated.

Read "Heed that Cough" on page 15 of February Good Housekeeping. Learn about the most common causes of chronic coughs, the real risk in a "cigarette cough," the relations of coughs to allergies, the nature of a "nervous cough."

Like all medical articles in Good Housekeeping (there's one every month), this report on coughs gives you sound advice, information that is detailed, authoritative, non-alarmist—genuinely helpful!

shop wisely for electric broilers, slipcovers, shampoos

Short-cut cooking with electric table broilers, roasters, electric casseroles is discussed on page 143 of February Good Housekeeping. Good Housekeeping (after a thorough study of the new electric table appliances) gives you a full report—tells you of many wonderful, and surprising, ways they can help you . . . gives you delicious, easy-fixing recipes!

Do you know the signs of a good-wearing slipcover fabric? What to do, what not to do when you're washing slipcovers? Time-saving tricks in ironing them? What's new in slipcover materials—new plastics and plastic-coated cottons?

You'll find just about everything you need to know about slipcovers on page 150.

Read about "Half-head" shampoos on page 25 of February Good Housekeeping, and you'll see why we stand back of every shampoo you'll find advertised in Good Housekeeping. (Every day in our Beauty Clinic we're busy trying out new products, new methods, new ideas—finding out which will be most helpful to you.)

see what's new in washable rayon fashions $25 or less

You've never seen lovelier clothes than in February Good Housekeeping! Eight full pages of Sunday suits and lunching-out dresses, year-round prints, and a prize catch of blouses.

Not a blessed one with a price tag more than $25! Not a blessed one that doesn't wash and iron with ease—belts and buttons and all! (We know—because we've put them through our Textile Laboratory, washed them and ironed them ourselves!)

More fashion news! (25 fashion pages altogether in February Good Housekeeping.) How to choose a foundation right for your figure. Bright new accessory ideas. Blouses and hats to make.

try out some wonderful fish and tongue dinner ideas

Ten fish dinners—quick and good! (See page 154 of February Good Housekeeping.) Frozen cod and haddock are the stars in some inspired recipes. A curried fish dinner. A company special with fillets dressed up in a shrimp cheese sauce. All of the recipes come with rest-of-the-meal suggestions—and special instructions if you're cooking just for two.

Then on page 141 there's the complete story on tongues . . . how to buy them (with news about today's tongues—mild-cured, waste-free, soaking unnecessary) . . . how to prepare them, plain or extra-fancy. Three wonderful ways to cook a tongue. Ten delicious ways to use what's left over. Plus four fine salads-with-tongue, eight tongue sandwich suggestions, and eight grand sauces to make a tongue tastier than ever.

Ever served bananas as a vegetable? Try out the reputation-making banana ideas you'll find on page 146 of February Good Housekeeping.

We give this seal to no one—the product that has it earns it.

WHAT DO YOU MEAN— TRUCK STRIKE!

There is no truck strike in Boston so far as a majority of the trucking companies are concerned. They have signed contracts with Local #25 of the Teamsters' Union. They are paying wages of $1.50 per hour for a 40-hour week.

The holdout companies in the Employers' Group have offered $1.27 per hour for a 48-hour week. The union has refused to accept this.

223 Companies have signed with the union!

THIS TRUCK STRIKE CAN END TODAY IF THE MINORITY OF COMPANIES WILL PAY THE WAGES THAT THE MAJORITY IS PAYING.

But the minority in the Employers' Group is more interested in breaking the union than in providing service for Boston. That is why there is a truck strike.

The following 223 companies have recognized their civic responsibility to the City of Boston and to their employees. They are paying good wages and giving good service.

If you need a truck, call one of these companies. They are doing business as usual.

Inducted, Brooks Praises Bradford

Judge Lawrence G. Brooks assumed the bench in Malden District Court today with the statement to assembled officials and friends that "two illuminating factors" had emerged from controversy over his membership in leftist organizations, from which he resigned before confirmation as presiding justice.

"One was the rallying of my friends," he said, "the other the steadfast character exemplified by Gov. Bradford in a trying situation."

Congratulatory speeches were made by Police Chief John G. Gates; Harry M. Lack, president of the Bar Ass'n of the first district of eastern Middlesex, Clerk Louis R. Shaffer and others. Present were Mayors Fred I. Lamson of Malden, Walter E. Lawrence of Medford and Thomas L. Thistle of Melrose.

Judge Brooks succeeds Judge Eldridge G. Davis, retired.

Three Scheduled Sponsors Quit Anti-Fascist Dinner

Two clergymen and an editor today were on record as withdrawing as part of the Joint Anti-Fascist Refugee Committee, which sponsored their names as co-sponsors of a dinner Feb. 6 at the Ritz-Carlton City Club. The organization has been branded subversive by Atty. Gen. Clark.

The trio are Dr. Frederick May Eliot, president of the American Unitarian Ass'n; Rev. Emory C. Burke, editor of Zion's Herald, and Alexander Brin, editor of the Jewish Advocate.

Arson Probed in Paris $5,000,000 Fire

PARIS, Jan. 30 (AP) - Police investigated the possibility of arson today in a fire which destroyed more than $5,000,000 in food and clothing. Included were 2000 tons of goods from the American Friendship Train.

The blaze destroyed a six-story warehouse in suburban Charenton. Firemen suspected arson because of the speed with which the flames spread through the stone and steel structure.

Russian Unions Map Plans for Higher Output

MOSCOW, Jan. 30 (AP)—Wider application of the piece-rate and bonus systems are to be given special attention in the thousands of trade union contracts which will be signed in the Soviet Union before April 1.

The All Union Central Council of Trade Unions—which has just concluded a session here—also instructed trade union organizations to devote special attention to drawing up these agreements in connection with wages and the setting up of production quotas.

"The main object of the new agreements," said a labor reporter writing about the proposals, "is to achieve, on the basis of higher productivity of labor, a rate of increase in output that would insure the fulfillment of the five-year plan in four years and thereby secure the further improvement of the working people's standard of living."

Lively discussion also followed the report delivered by Leonid Sobolev, council secretary, on the work of the unions in connection with monetary reform and abolition of rationing.

The view was unanimously expressed that the role of public control over trading and public catering organiations must be considerably heightened.

It was reported to the session that during 1947 some 11,000,000 square meters of housing floor space was made ready for occupancy in newly built or restored houses.

For all that it was stressed that the plan for housing construction and public services was not carried out in full, and criticism was leveled both at the trade union workers who, it was said, should have seen to it that the program was carried out and at the economic organizations that did not carry out all their commitments under the collective agreements.

Vasili Kuznetsov, council chairman, told the meeting that the average wage of the Soviet worker increased by 28.6 per cent in the third quarter of 1947 compared with the same period in 1946.

Germans to Stage Strike In Food Shortage Protest

FRANKFURT, Jan. 30 (INS)—The American military government received a report today that a half-million German workers in Wuerttemberg-Baden will stage a one-day strike Tuesday to protest food shortages.

The report coincided with a declaration by Gen. Lucius D. Clay, U. S. military governor, that Germans must not abuse the strike privilege with possible disorders.

Widening Chelsea Creek Span Urged by Officials

Shipping and oil company officials today urged that the draw opening of the Grand Junction B. & A. R. R. bridge spanning Chelsea creek between East Boston and Chelsea be widened.

Officials of both industries have put their views before Brig. Gen. Raymond G. Moses, division engineer of the Army who is conducting a hearing in the Federal Building.

LOWER PRICES UNION AIM

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 30 (AP)—The AFL United Hatters and Millinery Workers said in a resolution they would "rather have lower prices than higher wages."

Girl Saves Sister As Dad Dies by Gas

A Stoneham High School junior, Barbara McGrath, 14, today was given credit for saving the life of her sister Joyce, 10, from illuminating gas fumes which took the life of their father, William F. McGrath, 41, in their home on Elm st., Stoneham.

Joyce came home first to find her father unconscious in a kitchen chair, but failed to notice that four gas stove burners were open. A few minutes later, Barbara entered the house in time to pull her younger sister to safety.

Medical Examiner Ira W. Richardson said McGrath's death was suicide.

HERE'S WHY
YOU SHOULD USE
15% LESS HEATING OIL
THIS WINTER

The heating oil supply situation is critical. Unless you and all other users of heating oil burn 15% less than normal during January, February and March, your home may be cold! Today the industry's production is the greatest in history—BUT still not enough to meet the record demand. To save your 15%, take these steps now: Set thermostat at 68 . . . turn down to 60° at night or when away . . . keep radiators off in all unused rooms . . . use fireplace whenever possible — keep flues closed when not in use.

New Device Flies 'Copter in Balance

PALO ALTO, Cal., Jan. 30 (AP)—A helicopter which flies itself and can hover just above ground with no hand on the control stick has been announced by United Helicopters, Inc.

Stanley Hiller, young inventor and head of the company said the new model was "inherently stable" in that it would tend to right itself if tipped by a gust of wind. Conventional helicopters are subject to a swaying motion which requires constant manipulation of the controls.

The thing which gives the new model its stability, Hiller said, is a new type of control which consists of two additional short arms in the rotor mounted at right angles to the regular rotor blades, controlled from a stick at the pilot's seat. If the helicopter tips sidewise, a touch of the stick will bring it back in trim, Hiller asserted.

LIKE FATHER, LIKE SON

(A Complete Short Story)

By MARIE DE NERRAND

RODDY PULLED UP short in his headlong dash for the kitchen door as his mother's strident voice came through the open window. "He's just as bad as his father," she was exploding to someone inside. "Don't feed me this psychology bosh. 'Like father, like son.' Lord knows why he couldn't have taken some of my traits. But he's young enough to learn. No 10-year-old is going to get the best of me."

Shrinking close up against the house, Roddy desperately set himself to listen. His freckled face, which a moment before had been alive and eager with the afterglow of a riotous tumble in the autumn woods darkened to a scowling rebellion. He ran his hand through his mop of red hair, stuck out his lower lip and waited, grim eyes set hard and defiant for the answering voice. That new school-teacher, no doubt! Same old story, the school, the home, everything ganging up on him.

She hadn't wasted any time in running to his Ma about his playing hooky this afternoon. Well, he'd get even. Wait and see.

"You haven't learned much from life, have you, Ella?" It was the expected voice all right, but Roddy's jaw dropped with amazement at the words. Golly, how come she's stood for her was calling his mother "Ella"? But that amazement was nothing compared to what was to come. 'No wonder Rod's is the most troublesome little boy of the school. You have no more imagination now than—"

"I've got enough to realize that a mother knows more about children than an old maid school teacher," his mother snapped.

Roddy was fairly popped waiting for the answer to that one. Boy, who'd have thought they'd be fighting each other instead of ganging up on him, and he didn't know what that word meant, but Miss Everton had his number all right. He'd make her good and nervous, the way he had that last one who'd resigned!

Principal Character

RODDY, a problem child —"just like his father"— who is at daggers' points with MA till the teacher brings home a lesson.

"WHAT I'D EXPECT YOU TO SAY"

Miss Everton's laugh was an anti-climax. It was low and real-mirthful and not a bit mad. "That's just what I'd expect you to say, Ella. Well, there's no more use arguing with you now than there was when we were in school. All I'm asking is that you give me a free hand with Roddy. Don't give it up on him. Naturally, when you called me point blank and asked if he'd been at school this afternoon, I had to say no. But please don't let on to him that I told you. I want to get his confidence—"

"I'm not trying to buy my son to please anybody," his mother snorted and it Miss Everton didn't "Right and wrong. Thank heaven, I'm still strong enough both physically and morally, not to 'spare the rod and spoil the child.'"

"So that's your method!" There wasn't anything amused about Miss Everton's voice now. It even made Roddy shiver, just to listen to it. "I couldn't quite believe that of you, though I'd heard it rumored. Now that I know it, I'm getting in touch with Roddy's father. Yes, I see him off and on, and he's the same fine, sensitive person he always was. He has the right to Roddy six months of the year if he wants to exercise it. When he knows what I know, he will."

"You wouldn't dare!" His mother's voice made Roddy want to run away, but he couldn't get his legs to move, not even when he heard the scrape of chairs and Miss Everton's "Wait and see! The next minute, she was out the front door and walking down to the gate. Roddy heard his mother open the kitchen door and shout, "Roddy!"—but he was around the corner of the house, where she couldn't see him. Following a blind instinct that no fear of future punishment could stop, he streaked after Miss Everton.

Miss Everton knew his father! She'd said he was a fine person! Ever since he could remember anything, he'd been told his father was dirt. "Bad as your father!" "You're just like your father!" He only had the vaguest memory of his father. He'd been 4 when his mother and father had been divorced, and his mother had moved with him to this town.

Evidently she and Miss Everton had gone to school together, and now, somehow, Miss Everton had turned up here. Suddenly Roddy remembered how his mother's face had tightened when she'd asked the name of the new teacher. "Not Lucy Everton!" she'd said. Running down the road, it all came back. He rounded a turn and Miss Everton looked up and saw him.

"Why, Roddy! Where did you come from?" Her cheeks were flushed and her eyes troubled, but something in them made Roddy blurt out the truth.

She was all right! She hadn't come to tell on him. She'd understand.

"I was under the kitchen window, listening to you and Ma," he said. "Look! You know my dad! Is he—is he—I mean, is he really bad, like Ma says? You said he was——" He gulped and couldn't go on.

"I said he was fine, and he is." Lucy Everton put a hand on Roddy's shoulder, meeting his eyes with a friendly compassion that seemed to loosen up a hard knot inside him. "Listen," she added. "Let's go in these woods where we can sit down for a few minutes. I'd like to tell you about your father, Roddy."

Sitting on the fragrant pine needles, Roddy listened. It wasn't only what she told him, it was the feel of sympathy that made him certain his father wasn't a bad man at all.

"When your mother says 'bad,' Roddy, she really means different from herself. They just couldn't get on. The fact the judge gave your father half custody of you proves that he wasn't bad. But he felt that would be even worse for you, knowing it would unsettle you so. He thought your mother would soften up after the irritation of having him around was taken away. He's always sent money for your support. You know that, don't you, Roddy?"

Roddy shook his head, but a great gladness welled up in him. He'd wondered about that.

Miss Everton's lips tightened, but her eyes had a clear seeing look as she hesitated, then said, "Your mother's done what she thought was best for you, Roddy. There're lots of fine things about her, even if she doesn't understand people like your father or you. And she loves you, in her way. You must try to understand her. I have a feeling things are going to be different. She'll know I'm here and watching. You see," she rested her hand lightly for a moment on his knee, "your mother and I both knew your father."

"WOULD HE EVER MARRY AGAIN?"

Something in her voice made Roddy look up quickly, but her eyes were staring past him, and a vague embarrassment made him look away.

"Would he ever marry again?" Roddy asked, but he still didn't look at her as she answered. "I don't think so. He—" She stood up suddenly. "Come on, Roddy, you must get back. Only now you know your father isn't bad, you can't be bad any more, either, can you? You can be proud of him. Tell your mother the truth about playing hooky, and I think she'll see things differently. She wouldn't want to lose you, Roddy."

Slowly Roddy started back. In his mind a strange whirl of conjecture. Suppose Dad had married Miss Everton instead of his mother? Well, he couldn't be thinking about that. He had to be thinking about getting home.

His mother met him as he came in the kitchen door. "Where you been?" her voice was gruff, but her eyes had a relieved look.

"I played hooky and went to the woods," Roddy said.

"Well, I'm glad you told me," she turned to the stove. "Wash your hands. Supper's ready."

Roddy didn't move. "Aren't you going to whip me?"

"No."

"Then, I won't do it again." Roddy went to the bathroom with a marvelously lightened heart. Miss Everton had been right. Things were going to be different, but the biggest difference of all was knowing his father wasn't bad. Miss Everton said he could be proud of him. Roddy started to whistle as he turned on the water. He reckoned he'd just have to kind of ease Ma along instead of getting her riled up. Oh, yes, things were going to be different.

THE END.

Hub Museum Gets $2,000,000 Art

Through the will of John T. Spaulding, retired sugar magnate and Boston lawyer who died Friday, an art collection valued at more than $2,000,000 has been left to the Boston Museum of Fine Arts.

Announcement of the bequest was made by G. H. Edgell, director of the museum, who said it was one of the most important ever made to the local institution. With the 19th and 20th century paintings goes a $100,000 fund for maintenance of the collection.

Paintings in the collection include six Renoirs, including flower pieces, landscapes and portrait studies; a landscape and a still life by Cezanne; a landscape and the famed "Berceuse" a woman posing as a nurse, by Vincent Van Gogh; also a flower piece of Courbet, and works of Logas and Rubens.

Amish Member Receives $5000 Imposed by Court

WOOSTER, O., Jan. 30 (AP)—Final payment of a $5000 judgement today apparently concluded a court action resulting from imposition of an Amish church boycott against a 33-year-old member of the bearded sect.

The sum was awarded Andrew J. Yoder after he testified in common pleas court that four officials of the church caused him to be socially ostracized for five years when he transferred from Helmuth church district to the more liberal Bunker Hill district.

SOME PHYSICIANS claim that over-eating is a cover-up for under-living . . . a cover-up for any number of emotional reasons from lack of interest to nervous excitement, a defense mechanism against insecurity.

There's definitely a psychological angle to simple obesity, they claim. When a woman has nothing else to do . . . nothing more important to occupy her heart and her mind . . . she turns to food to satisfy the void. Generally speaking, the basic reason for over-weight is over-eating. Glandular disturbances are minority causes for simple obesity, the medicos assert.

Eating is a habit . . . and the more one eats the more one wants to eat. The cycle is a vicious one . . . and usually gets well out of hand before it is halted. And it is halted, the doctors claim, when a sudden exaltation comes into an individual's life. Only when a major consideration presents itself . . . like romance, love, the sudden desire to want to be admired and respected . . . does the obese woman develop the mental attitude which directs her will power into channels of food denial.

ATTITUDE OF MIND

While it takes power to follow through any period of self-deprivation . . . it takes something more than the mere will to do. It requires an attitude of mind . . . an important objective . . . an established goal to set the wheels of will power sufficiently in to motion to impel and compel a woman to switch from what she has been doing comfortably and naturally into a frame of mind of imposed sacrifice.

You've seen women eating and eating out of sheer nervousness. They must keep eating to keep happy. They must eat to forget some unpleasantness. They are forever grabbing a cookie, or a sweet, or a piece of this or a spoonful of that as they move about their homes. Maybe suddenly a thought comes into their minds . . . so they sit down to a cup of coffee or tea and a sandwich or a snack to think it out . . . although, perhaps, only an hour before they had a rugged lunch.

They meet friends on the street and because sitting at a table eating gives them an artificially induced sense of poise . . . they participate in a couple of ice cream sodas. Eating, eating, always eating . . . because of the lack of something better or more vital to do. Not even children are permitted to do that . . . since to allow it would be to wreck their routine, get them off schedule and spoil their appetites for the body-building essentials they must have.

INSECURE WOMEN

Women with inhibitions are usually women with excess weight. Insecure women . . . over-anxious, easily depressed, easily elated . . . are very often fat women. Because food represents security . . . it is the stable thing in life, since to eat is to live . . . women turn to food . . . and more than is good for them.

So search yourself for the reason for your simple obesity. Is there a psychological reason why you are fat . . . if you are otherwise in normal good health? Women who have much to live for . . . to be proud of . . . home, children, adoring husband . . . are the ones who take sufficient pride in their personal appearance to make that appearance a presentable silhouette of proportionate slimness.

MAKE LIFE SIMPLE

And losing weight is also contingent on the emotional picture. The woman who fights it . . . doesn't lose. The woman who does it with a happy thought in mind for a happy purpose in view . . . achieves the goal she has set for herself.

Life is so simple . . . if people would only make it so.

In tomorrow's Boston American, we'll tie up the loose thoughts of the diet series and sound some pertinent reminders for the future.

The Correct Thing

By ELINOR AMES

TELL ESCORT—When a lady has an escort she does not speak directly to the waiter. She tells her escort what she wants to order, lets him know that she wants her coffee weaker, another slice of lemon, etc., and he relays this information to the waiter.

Retains Title Of Senator

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: To settle a family discussion, will you please answer our question? My mother's brother was a Senator, but he is now out of office. While he was in office, we, of course, introduced him to our friends as "Senator Smith," and my mother insists that this title should be used for him now, even though he is not in office. My father maintains that we should now drop the title of "Senator" and use "Mr." before his name. He and his wife will be coming to see us soon and we would like to know the answer to our question. Thank you. FRED.

Your mother is right . . . a Senator does not lose his title after he is out of office. So introduce him, for example, "Mrs. Brown, may I present my uncle, Senator Smith."

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When one is at a dinner-party in a home where there is a waitress, should one, before the dinner plate or the salad plate is removed, put an unused piece of silver on the plate? Or should this be left on the table for the waitress to remove? FLORA.

The unused piece (or pieces) of silver should be left on the table for the waitress to remove just before she crumbs the table before the dessert course.

POWDER, PERFUME and this devastating Walter Florell designed "harvest hat" . . . and a woman has got all that really matters fashion-wise . . . she's got allure and allure is spring's keynote of femininity. Of course, the model has beauty on her own merit . . . AND one of the new short hairdos. Florell calls his hat "young love" . . . trims it with halos of transparent wheat which he says will cast a pretty shadow over the face when the spring sun gleams through spears of light.

Here's Bargain Offer In Powder and Perfume

EVERY WOMAN enjoys a beauty bargain especially when it includes two of the most indispensable aids on the shelf . . . powder and perfume. Could you do without them? Not I! So when a new beauty tie-up of these two items appears on the cosmetic counters around town . . . we think the idea has sufficient merit to merit a few cheers from us.

The women who follow cosmetic news . . . and if there is a woman who doesn't please show her to me . . . will remember the famous "2-0-8" face powder that came out last summer . . . its debut representing a new development in the art of making beauty powder. More cling, more cover, better color and longer-lasting fragrance were some of the justifiable claims.

Even the fragrance that went into the powder had traditional importance. Now that both the face powder and the perfume have been packaged in one . . . but as separate items and at a bargain price . . . we just know it is going to meet with instant success.

From a regular-size box of this beauty powder . . . some of the powder has been lifted in order to make room to enclose a purse flacon of the perfume . . . reminiscent of a gay and springtime holiday in Paris. Then the top of the powder box is replaced . . . the combination is marked "special introductory offer" . . . and it sells for only one dollar.

This is a double-barreled offer . . . since the combination package contains a generous two-month supply of face powder and the regular size purse flacon of perfume . . . both for the single greenback.

No woman can do without face powder. No woman ought to do without perfume. This is the season . . . remember . . . when perfume becomes a luxurious necessity . . . or a necessary luxury, however you call it—R.M.

For the name of this special introductory offer of beauty powder and heritage—endowed perfume, phone the Beauty Dept., Liberty 2-4000, any day except Sunday, or write to Ruth Mugglebee, care of the Boston American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Simple Accents Help

By EILEEN CALLAHAN

THE SIMPLEST things often make the most effective accents on a costume. If the cut of a dress is superbly knowledgeable, and if its fabric and color suit the cut perfectly, it takes only a touch of emphasis to make the dress truly notable.

After a winter season of lavish costume decoration, the trend for spring is toward simplicity in detailing. Instead of gold-encrusted embroidery, you will now see fanned sections of pleating; instead of contrasting applique, self-stitching; instead of lines of sequins, a row of tiny buttons.

Travis Banton designed the costume sketched today for Valli to wear in Selznick's "The Paradine Case," the new movie directed by Alfred Hitchcock. It is unadorned black jersey, made with a long tunic that narrows from wide shoulders to tight hips. A row of self-buttons runs down the length of the tunic. The sleeves are full, but tightly banded at the wrists. The skirt is slim.

Let's Eat

BY IDA BAILEY ALLEN

CHEF, do you remember that wonderful log cabin restaurant we visited when we were in Colorado on our recent coast-to-coast tour?"

"Oh yes! That was where they served the American-style smorgasbord."

"And how attractive the foods looked in those big, fat round casseroles with handles! There were about fifty different dishes, all typically American. Boston baked beans, macaroni baked with rat-trap cheese, old fashioned samp Creole style, rice baked with minced herbs. But of them all, there's one that keeps tingling my palate—the potatoes escalloped with bacon."

"That is simple to prepare," commented the Chef. "With the bacon and milk, it makes a substantial dish."

FOR FAMILY DINNER

"It could be the main dish for the family dinner if enough is provided," I suggested. "As for the milk that's needed, my recipe calls for a quart. This can be fresh whole milk, or, for money-saving, we can use dried skim milk."

"I have a package of the skim milk in the kitchen," said the Chef. "It is very easy to use. To make 1 qt., I measure 4 c. water in a bowl, and beat in 1 c. of the dried skim milk with the egg beater. It tastes very good, and it is inexpensive. We chefs have been using it for a long time. I always keep it on hand in case I run out of the fresh milk. And I always keep the dried whole milk also. It is a great convenience."

Many persons think skim milk has hardly any food value. But, as a matter of scientific fact, it contains all of the nutritive elements of milk except the fat. As the full protein content is retained, it is an excellent food to use in dishes that are an alternate to meat.

TOMORROW'S DINNER

Red Kidney Bean Soup
Toasted Rolls
Potatoes Escalloped with Bacon
Snowflake Spinach
Apple Pancake Honey Butter
Coffee or Tea Milk (Children)
All measurements are level
Recipes Serve Four

RED KIDNEY BEAN SOUP

Pick over 1 cup red kidney beans, place in large saucepan. Pour in 2 qt. boiling water. Cover closely and let stand 56 min. Add 2 sprigs parsley, 2 slices onion, ¼ tsp. powdered bayleaf, 1½ tsp. salt and ⅛ tsp. pepper. Boil until beans are tender, from 1½ to 2 hr. Drain, and save the liquid. There should be about 5 cups. Rub beans through a sieve; add bean liquid and 1 pt. milk. Bring to boiling point. Cream 2 tbsp. flour with 2 tbsp. margarine or savory drippings. Add a little of the hot soup to this; when smooth, return to soup mixture and boil and stir 3 min.

To Pressure Cook: Use half the amount of water and pressure cook beans 35 min. Finish as directed

POTATOES ESCALLOPED WITH BACON

Scrub, peel and thin-slice enough raw white potatoes to make 5 c. Mix with 3 tbsp. flour, 1 tsp. salt and ⅛ tsp. pepper. Place in a well-oiled baking dish and pour in 1 qt. scalded whole milk, reconstituted skim milk, or equal parts evaporated milk and water. Cover and bake 1 hr. in a moderate oven, 350 F. Then place strips of scalded bacon on top and bake until brown and crisp. To scald bacon, pour over boiling water, then drain. This removes excess fat that would make the potatoes over-rich.

SNOWFLAKE SPINACH

Turn contents of a can of spinach into a saucepan. If coarse and stringy, chop it up with a pastry blender. Add a little grated onion, ½ tsp. each sugar and nutmeg, and bring to boiling point. Add 1 tbsp. butter or margarine and ½ c. fine, soft bread crumbs. Simmer 3 min. Transfer to a serving dish; cover lightly with cottage cheese or cream cheese rubbed through a sieve.

APPLE PANCAKES

Make up any prepared pancake batter, using a little more milk than specified on the package, and adding 1tbsp. sugar to 2 c. of the prepared flour. Stir in 1 c. very small thin slices of peeled tart apple. Drop by tablespoons on a heated oiled griddle. As soon as bubbles form on top, turn to finish frying. Serve with honey-butter or cinnamon and sugar.

Honey-Butter: Heat 2-3 c. honey, or 1-3 c. each honey and any kind of left-over canned fruit juice, with 1 tbsp. butter or margarine

TRICK OF THE CHEF

Put pancake batter in a pitcher with a wide spout rubbed with cooking oil, and you can pour the batter onto the griddle without spilling

Hostess' Favorite Recipe

By MARTHA LEE

MRS. HERBERT B. EHRMANN, noted for her interest in social service work and secretary of the Massachusetts Council for the Abolition of the Death Penalty, in telling us about this delicious Cheese Torte, said she first tasted it in Portland, Me., and liked it so well she brought the recipe back with her. Now she serves it as a Sunday night supper dessert—with meat and vegetables or a salad main dish.

CHEESE TORTE

15 zwieback or graham crackers
½ lb. butter
2 lbs. cream cheese
1½ cups sugar
2 tsp. vanilla
6 eggs

Roll zwieback fine and mix with butter. Line sides and bottom of a torte pan with this mixture to make a crust. Mash cream cheese. Beat eggs lightly and combine with cream cheese, sugar and vanilla. Mix well. Pour this cheese filling into crumb crust, and bake in 375 deg. F. oven for 1 hour, or a little longer if necessary. Then remove from oven and spread the following mixture over the torte:

1 pint sour cream
¼ tbsp. sugar
1 tsp. vanilla

Beat well together. Spread over the torte which has been baked. Then raise the oven temperature to 475 deg. F., and put torte back in the oven for about 5 minutes—just to set the sour cream. When the pie is done, sprinkle a little sugar and cinnamon on the top of it. Serve cold. Makes 10 to 12 servings.

TAKE A deep breath and say "ahl" after looking at this afternoon cape of antelope-colored woolen . . . lined in crepe of the same shade. Its dramatic intent is obvious . . . and only the dramatic can do it justice. Full, long and circular . . . it has a small stand-up collar and a bow-tied neckline. It is from Herbert Sondheim's spring collection . . . and when we recently viewed it . . . the cape was worn over a one-piece navy blue wool dress with three-quarter sleeves and belted with antelope suede for a magnificent fashion presentation.

More Fun for Mothers

By BEATRICE FIRFAX

IT WOULD certainly be a fine thing if the average husband could be broad-minded enough to set himself the job of finding out what it is like to run a house and take care of children all day long.

The object of doing this, of course, would be for him to gain a realization of what it is like to stay inside the four walls of a home day after day, washing, ironing, and cleaning; making beds, preparing meals, and, at the same time, looking after lively youngsters who get into everything if you take your eyes off them

I think one day with such a routine would be sufficient to convince most husbands that wives should have more relaxation and recreation, that mothers ought to have more fun.

It is all very well for a man to come home at night tired from his work in the office, factory, or wherever. But at least he has had the change of seeing something besides the inside of his home, and has had the stimulation of meeting and talking with people outside it.

SHE SHOULD GO OUT

To the wife who has been coping with all the things mentioned above, ever since he left in the morning, and has only an evening of the same to look forward to, it is pretty hard to take when, if she happens to say that she is tired herself, her husband replies: "Why should you be tired? What did you do all day long?" Under such circumstances, no woman could be blamed for feeling, as one of my correspondents says she does, that "I could hit my husband over the head with something."

It seems to me that the only thing a wife who has had the misfortune to marry such a character can do its to make up her mind to go out and have some recreation whether her husband likes it or not. In this particular case, the wife speaks of having "a good mother," and the implication seems to be that this mother lives with her. If this is the case, it shouldn't be too hard for her to arrange time off for herself during which the mother could look after the youngsters. No doubt this woman has friends of her own with whom she could spend an afternoon or an evening.

AVOIDS QUARREL

I think that if she is able to make the arrangement of having her mother look after her children, she should take at least one afternoon and one evening a week off for herself. If her husband quarrels with her about this, she should try to keep her temper and refuse to argue about it. In her letter, she says that whenever she has gone out by herself he has made such a fuss that, in order to avoid a quarrel, she stays home.

But a good idea to remember is that it takes two to make a quarrel, and if she simply declines to let herself be drawn into one, he will not be able to carry it on very long. It will, of course, require great effort to maintain good temper and calmness in the face of reproaches and nagging. But if she can do so, and carry out her plan calmly and consistently, it might easily give her husband a new respect for her as a woman of independent spirit and resourcefulness.

At any rate, such a program is worth a try, and I hope she will give it one.

Gold Mining Film Gives Met Plenty of Talent and Action

By PEGGY DOYLE

Hollywood, forever being chided for making pictures for 12-year-olds, comes of age with a terrific wallop in "Treasure of Sierra Madre," writer-director John Huston's magnificent fable of three characters in search of gold and what it does to them.

Harshly realistic and, in some scenes, ominously savage, "Treasure," which is presently distinguishing the Met Theater screen, is not for the nice-nellies or the soap-opera fan following it has no heroine period, and its only truck with love is in connection with the gold the three men seek in Mexico's mountains.

It is in the mid-20s when the three Americans on the bum get talking of gold-mining in a fleabitten, 50 cents a night flophouse in Tampico. Old Howard (played by Walter Huston, 41-year-old John's father) has been gold-rushing the greater part of his life, has struck it rich and lost it in a non-productive vein again and again, has become a kindly, humorous philosopher on the subject of ol' debbil catalyst, gold.

Fred C. Dobbs (Humphrey Bogart) is certain it wouldn't alter him if he hit it rich, say, for $25,000, vows that he could take it and quit cold. Young Curtin (Tim Holt) only wants enough gold to stake him to a California orchard, a throwback to the happiest summer in his life when he worked with a gang of contented singing fruit-pickers.

The going is tougher than the younger men ever imagined. They are stalked by jungle Indians, tangle with a steely-eyed Texan (Bruce Bennett) who would muscle in on their mine project, engage in a savage contest with 12 killer-bandits.

Meanwhile, Dobbs starts cracking up, insists on a daily three-way division of the spoils, loses sleep-spying on his partners who he believes are planning to rob him, tries to bully Curtin into walking out on their scheduled rendezvous with the absent Howard and splitting the latter's third two ways.

Walter Huston gives a performance that says "Oscar" all over it. Bogart's Bogartianism has so long been a major Hollywood product that it is no wonder he cannot always keep himself out of the character he plays, in this instance, the puny-brained, fear-ridden Dobbs. He does, though, do a masterful job of make-believing most of the unreeling. Young Holt's integrity and stamina earmark a performance that provides a striking character contrast to the older men.

Another stalwart portrayal is Alfonso Bedoya's bandit leader, whose trick of the year is to put malevolence into a toothy smile. Bruce Bennett's appearance is brief but potent.

For the courage to make in Hollywood a magnificently tough, unconventional movie sans sex and without otherwise going soft in the interests of the box office, John Huston deserves to and may strike it rich, Warners' "Treasure" making up for its minus S. A. by a monumental masculine appeal, a ready-made clique when they

Melodrama, Melody for RKO Boston Fans

Melodrama and Melody share the honors o the current screen and stage bill at the RKO Boston, where "Secret Beyond the Door" is the film attraction and big Mildred Bailey of the big voice heads the footlights talent bitery.

In "Secret Beyond the Door," Joan Bennett succumbs to the fascination of a stranger, Michael Redgrave, marries him and straightens out the moody fellow just in time to save herself from death at his ordinarily tender hands.

It is a Fritz Lang-directed production, which is to say that the camera and sound are used to build a shuddery structure of suspenseful terror, that the impressive, colorful settings are a dominant factor in the melodramatic impact.

Too many times, however, the frighteningly anticipated event founders on an anti-climactic note. The story's denouement also is a disappointment.

Miss Bailey, whose appearance signalled a storm of applause, is in her usual fine form, which is all her enormous fan following needs to know to make this old-home week at the RKO Boston. Her repertoire includes "There'll Be Some Changes Made," "Almost Like Being In Love," "Don't Worry About Strangers" (a novelty number), and, of course, her theme song, "Old Rockin' Chair's Got Me."

The Ravens, a Negro quartet who have appeared with Cab Calloway and are coming up fast by way of their recordings, found a ready-made clique when they stepped on stage. They used a deep bass voice to carry lyrics and melody in some numbs and a blend of soprano and tenor that can go falsetto. They stop the show, and doubtless will it every show, they're that go

Case of Public Nose-Poking in Williams Affair

By AUSTEN LAKE

MAYBE IT IS MY PESKY knack for learning what other people think so I can think something else, but I refuse to join the popular condemnation of Ted Williams for his absentee fatherhood and being caught with his fishing tackle down when his baby was born prematurely. I argue that is a matter between himself, his wife, his parson and his God, and not one for a sport page tribunal.

Who knows what emotional storms gyrate and churn within a man's bosom or what strains and distempers shaped his early life? And who among us has the right to examine his neighbor's personal conscience or parade his domestic blemishes or audit his private behavior in print? As one who has often biffed and bopped Williams for his baseball eccentricities, I will continue to write the stark naked truth where it concerns his actions or awkardnesses on the ball field and adjacent spots, but I'm goldurned if I feel privileged to shingle his rumplestiltskin on matters of family folly or nature's uncertainties or bedroom policy.

Question of Newspaper Ethics

IF TED FAILED TO "run this one out" he is his own umpire, manager and cheering section. It's HIS business. But if he loafs on an infield grounder, tips his cap to a hot outfield roller, throws a clubhouse tantrum or goes into spiritual insomnia at the plate, that's MY business and I will have my little say on the subject.

I am quick to say, before you do, that I have many failings but among them is not spying on a lady's pregnancy or keeping score on her gestation period or her husband's reaction to paternal responsibility. Nor can I ever understand the public's curiosity in such obstetrical data.

By your permission I will now discuss a fine point in newspaper ethics and try to trace the thin wavering line which separates legitimate public curiosity and an athlete's right to reserve the intimate facts of his life private. I will cite the ball player who appeared at spring training not long ago in a high state of hilarious hiccups and barricaded himself in a hotel room where he refused to answer the telephone or door knocks and could be heard snoring the happy hours away.

While I am one of those right thinking people who like to pretend horrified shock at such shennanigans, the player had not officially reported for training nor drawn a uniform and therefore his overdosage was not a subject of newspaper research. None of the ball writers touched it.

But again! Once there was a hockey manager who got lubricated to a state of fumbling inebriacy before and during a critical Stanley Cup game at Toronto, and was clearly unable to perform the delicate brain functions required of a hockey master mind, particularly as the opposition filled his nets with more pucks than a fisherman could seine up on the Grand Banks. I maintained that, since the manager got himself smushed on public time and could not give the crowd a hundred cents worth for their dollars, it was a public problem, and so stated, though of course with my usual dainty elegance.

Williams' Greatest Fault

IT REQUIRED MUCH patience and time to convince Williams that journalists are not a kind of human blue bottle fly, fit only for tanglefoot paper or to be swatted with snubs—if indeed he was ever convinced, and I am not sure of it. I don't care if he [illegible] I do not consider [illegible] to hold church [illegible] relations and be [illegible] manner with those of [illegible] of sport like Babe Ruth, Gene Tunney, George Preston Marshall and others, who [illegible] is pernicious mugg of early mental age who kept rattling their chamber doors and ringing their telephones when they wished to think some private thoughts. We know where we stand.

Some of [illegible] our fault and some their's and I will admit that I once suggested to Williams that he [illegible] tantrums with a goofy doll he got. His bombast, brown-eyed glowers and unpredictable actions gave me tons of news copy and made my tasks lighter. However, there is a limit to that sort of thing and a man's relations with his wife and baby is one, especially as the stork dropped its precious, pink-trimmed bundle two weeks ahead of schedule. But there I go sticking my long snoot into maternity matters as if it is amazing the mammas have babies, either on time table or out, while daddy is a-hunting.

What do we mighty moralizers of the sport page and downtown bunchbars expect of our athletes anyway? Must they all be paragons of virtue, impeccable models and topics for Sunday school sermonizing. It would be nice, of course! But I cringe to think of some of the didoes I have cut in my day and I am sure there are one among the great baseball [illegible] who sit summer times on Tuesday's sunny slopes who would neither blue murder if their own privacies were invaded and their comings and goings by the light o' th' moon were scrutinized under public microscope.

So Ted Williams' greatest fault is being Ted Williams and from what little dealings I have had with Mrs. Williams, her ever [illegible] she likes Ted pretty much as he is and, never so far as I know, has conked him with a flower pot or burned down his ears with sulphuries. She thinks Ted is about right and, if my information is correct, the feeling is mutual. So I'm goshdarned if I see where it's anybody's business if the lady wishes to have a small replica of herself a little early, thereby catching papa with his fishing tackle down. Whose pandemonium is this anyway?

AHA Bows in Olympic Opener; I. O. C. Threat Still Hanging

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Jan. 30 (AP)—The U. S. Amateur Hockey Association's ice hockey team, center of an international wrangle that has cast a shadow over the fifth winter Olympic Games, went down in defeat today in its first game here. Switzerland defeated the AHA, 5to 4, in a contest described by an Olympic official as an "international competition and not an Olympic event."

Ralph Warburton, Cranston, R. I., wingman for the U. S. squad, rammed in three goals in the final period in a mighty effort to save the day, but the Swiss matched this and saved the victory.

The much-discussed American team, to which the American Olympic committee has taken a violent exception and which was ordered out of the games by the International committee, failed to show the brilliance that had been expected of it.

The Poltera brothers carried the load for Switzerland. Ueli Poltera drew first blood after 14 minutes of a listless first period, made another counter in the second, which ended with Switzerland leading 2-1, and tallied again in the final canto along with brother, G. Poltera.

The AHA team was not allowed to join the official Olympic parade and watched from the sidelines. The Swiss hockey team refused to parade out of sympathy with their fellow members of the Internation Hockey Federation, but all this good will disappeared once play started.

Rough work was frequent, and in the second period Jack Riley of Medford, Mass., took a swing at a Swiss player in front of the Swiss goal, but escaped a penalty.

RALPH WARBURTON
Scored Four Goals

A moment later he made the first U. S. goal—the only one not by Warburton.

Canada and Sweden met in the second hockey match immediately afterward in the face of an announcement by an authoritative Swiss source that the international Olympics committee has threatened to call off the games tomorrow if hockey continues.

2-Man U. S. Bobsled Team Second in Olympic Run

ST. MORITZ, Switzerland, Jan. 30 (AP)—The United States two-man bobsled team of Fred Fortune and Schuyler Carron finished second to an Italian tandem in the first heats today in that Olympic event.

Fortune and Carron negotiated the 1610-meter (around one mile) course in 1 minute 25.8 seconds.

The Italians, Mario Vitali and Dario Poggi, made the run in one minute 25 seconds flat.

The French teams were William Hirigoyen and Saint Catbre on one sled and Henri Fould and H. J. Evrot on the other.

Memories of Old Timers Revived

By FRED HOEY

There were no startling developments at the Baseball Writers annual dinner last night, but the dedications of awards to five of the past season's outstanding performers revived the memories of Hub sportswriters who have penned their last lines and scribed their final box score, but still are remembered each year when the scribes gather.

More than 900 authors, ballplayers and critics jammed the main ballroom at the Copley Plaza last evening and, though the general atmosphere that prevailed was one of hilarity, a somber chord was struck at the presentations that perpetuate the memories of our comrades who have gone.

Only a tiny portion of the packed batting order of speakers and entertainers was devoted to reviving memories of those who have gone, but it was enough. Little Fred Lane, American make-up editor died a hero's death last New Year's Eve when he suffocated while ascertaining that there was no one still sleeping in his home that was razed by fire. Paul Shannon and Eddie McGrath, both of the Post, who were familiar habitues of the Fenway and Wigwam press boxes, were present, momentarily pardoned from their Valhalla as tributes were paid in their respective memories.

To Bob Elliott the MVP in the National League was awarded the McGrath trophy; Frank "Spec" Shea of the Yankees received the Paul Shannon trophy; and Joe Cronin, subing for Ted Williams, was given the Lane Memorial. The latter, the newest of the trophies, was a beautiful, engraved, custom-made hunting rifle, the same style that both Williams and Freddy Lane loved.

The 10 special guests, all heroes of a bygone era of Boston baseball, felt the same. The presence of Hughie Duffy, a never-ageing diamond figure, Judge Emil Fuchs, Fred Mitchell, Bill Carrigan, Jack Barry, Del Bissonette, Patsy Donovan, Fred Tenney, Jack Slattery and Shano Collins remember them all—added a touch. They were all there last night, how many will be back with us in 1949?

Also honored for their freshman performances were Earl Torgeson of the Braves and Sam Mele of the Red Sox, who were presented joint awards as the outstanding rookies. Normally only one player is thus honored, but this year the scribes were unable to choose between the two.

Red Sox to Bid for Chicago Schoolboy Ace

CHICAGO, Jan. 30 (AP)—Scouts from at least 10 major league baseball clubs have dates to discuss contract business with George (Lefty) Zoeterman, the young high school pitcher whom the Chicago White Sox lost last fall for signing before he graduated from high school.

The 17-year-old southpaw, who was the center of the controversy between the White Sox and Commissioner A. B. Chandler, tonight will receive his diploma at Chicago Christian High School.

From tomorrow through Tuesday it will be a virtual steady round of meetings for the young prep graduate with big league scouts who are anxious to sign him. The White Sox were fined $300 by Chandler for signing Zoeterman while he still was in high school. Under baseball law a high school player may be signed a day after he graduates.

The much sought after pitcher, who hurled four no-hit games in the Chicago private league, has arranged four meetings tomorrow with representatives from as many major league clubs. The first is set for 10 a. m., to be followed by confabs at 1, 3 and 6 p. m. Monday's schedule calls for sessions with three club representatives. He will meet with three other scouts on Tuesday.

Clubs reported ready to offer Zoeterman contracts include Cleveland, Boston, New York and Detroit of the American League and St. Louis, Chicago and Philadelphia of the National League.

Mrs. Peter G. Zoeterman, George's mother, said last night 10 clubs had arranged to discuss terms with him.

All of baseball, except the White Sox, is privileged to bid for the Chicago prep star. The Sox are barred from the signing derby because of their previous negotiating which resulted in their being fined.

Mead Seen as Irish-American Ring Attraction

By JACK CONWAY

IT IS NO REASON that one of the reasons Matchmaker "Rip" Valenti signed Pete Mead of New York to meet Al (Red) Priest in a ten-round bout at a Goodwin A. C. show at the Garden on next Monday night was in the hope of developing a new Irish-American ring attraction. Mead, a product of Grand Rapids, Michigan, comes of Irish ancestry, and Valenti feels that if he can win from Priest that he will have tremendous box-office appeal.

Mead campaigns under the banner of Tex Sullivan who contends that what boxing needs is more Irish-American boxers. Since Sullivan moved Mead into New York from the Mid-west, he has won 22 out of 26 starts, and evened up his score with three of the carefree mitt wielders who defeated him.

It was Phil Buccalo who first saw the potential possibilities possessed by Mead. Buccalo and Dan Carroll attended a recent boxing bout at Miami, Fla., which saw Mead winning. After the bout, Buccalo suggested that Mead be matched to meet Priest in Boston.

"Mead will have a good chance of winning as he is a wide open action fighter," said Buccalo. "But even if he should lose, he will look good. He walks to close quarters much like Mike O'Dowd did when the latter was world's middleweight champion."

Another Mike O'Dowd would certainly sparkle up the local boxing situation.

Irish-American boxers have always been popular here. Mike O'Dowd, Eddie Shevlin, Young Kloby, Jim Maloney and other ring stars of Irish-American extraction have scaled the fistic heights.

Opportunity will certainly be knocking at Mead's door next Monday night. He will have his chance to gain fistic glory and his share of riches when he tangles with Priest.

Priest Will Try to Regain Prestige

WORD FROM PRIEST'S training camp at the New Garden Gym is that the Cambridge red-head and former All-America champion is displaying more fire and viciousness in his workouts than he has for many months. Two defeats by Ralph Zanelli, while upsetting to Priest, caused him to go at his training program with more vigor than usual. Priest recently lost a close decision to Anton Raadik in Chicago after a stirring contest. Priest only weighed 153 pounds for Raadik which was six pounds lighter than he was for Zanelli.

Matty Norton, one of the best conditioners of boxers, is in charge of Priest's training. Matty says that Priest will be in old-time form when he meets Mead and that he will win.

"It will be a new experience for Priest to have an opponent who will force the issue," said Norton. "Al usually has to chase his ring rivals. You may be sure Priest will not back away from Mead, and that it will be an old-fashioned, two-fisted battle."

The semi-final of ten rounds will bring together Dulio Spagnolo of Italy and Harry Bernsten, Scandinavian heavyweight.

Zale Like to Meet Rocky Graziano Again

IT IS LIKELY that Tony Zale will risk suspension in New York and by the National Boxing Ass'n to meet Rocky Graziano, world's middleweight champion, again. The boxing solons have shown no indication of agreeing to let up on Graziano, and as a result it will be necessary to stage the bout in some state that has no agreement with New York or with the National Boxing Ass'n.

Atlantic City is being considered as a possible place for the championship match. For years various promoters have attempted to secure a top attraction for the huge Auditorium in Atlantic City, but at the last minute the proposed bout has always been transferred some place else.

If a Graziano-Zale bout is held in Atlantic City, it would have to take place in the late spring or early summer. Right now most of the resort hotels are closed in Atlantic City, while those that are opened only have a limited number of guests.

Zale is near the end of his ring career, and after another bout with Graziano he would probably have sufficient funds to retire. Tony has been keeping in condition by engaging in minor bouts through the Middle West.

Random Shots at Target

LEO DUROCHER says the Dodgers will rely on their dazzling speed to win the National League pennant again this year. "Barney Shotton stole the pennant last year," said Durocher. The records show that Brooklyn stole 88 bases, a third more than our nearest rival, but what does not show is the extra bases we took, the base hit 'stretching' we did to get other clubs jittery and open up our own opportunities."

Good Deed Leads to 'Ringer' Story

(This is the sixth in a series of articles giving the "inside" story of how George Mahoney, former chairman of the Maryland Racing Commission, broke up racetrack crookedness during his epochal six years on the Maryland commission.)

By ALEXANDER GIFFORD

This is the story of how a man cast his bread upon the waters and it came back a ham sandwich with trimmings.

If it were an Earle Stanley Gardner mystery yarn, it might be entitled "The Case of the Shivering Stool Pigeon."

It started with the running of two crooked races at Pimlico racetrack on Nov. 12 and Nov. 27, 1945.

It was a ringer case, which to the uninitiated simply means that the nefarious operators substituted a fast horse for a slow one without undergoing the formality of changing the names.

SENT TO PRISON

The slow horse was a nag named Rounco, and the fast one which actually did the running, was Flying Kilts. In the first instance the flier got third, and the second time out, he won the race, paying $15.80 for $2, thus defrauding the racetrack, not to mention a few thousand bettors.

The story ended with both operators involved in the case getting prison terms, in addition to being barred from racing for life.

But how Racing Commission Chairman George Mahoney uncovered the facts makes a fascinating "inside story," much of which has never been told in print until right now.

So, for the real beginning, we have to go back months before the actual crooked race and we find George Mahoney, the hardest working commissioner in the history of the tracks, late at night, wandering among the barns at Pimlico to see what he could see.

FORGOTTEN MEN

It was one of Mahoney's ideas that the "men behind the scenes" who really put on the show or racing, the grooms, the exercise boys, the assistant trainers, the stable boys, just are the "forgotten men of the back-stretch."

Always striving to get these men better pay, better living conditions, and more recognition for their efforts, he was strolling along on the night in question, and saw the glimmer of a small kerosene stove in front of a barn.

Hunched over it was a small, ill-dressed character, his face and hands pinched with cold. The head of a proud thoroughbred, its breath making white puffs of cloud in the frigid night air, bent over the man's shoulder.

MAN WAS DRUNK

Mahoney observed the man was pretty drunk. He said:

"Be careful with your cigarets old chap."

The man stirred locked up and scrambled to his feet.

"Mr. Mahoney!"

The commissioner said:

"How do you know my name?"

"All the boys know you, you're the only one gives us a hand."

"Where's your home?"

"Philly."

"What's wrong, why dont you go home this week end?"

"I got fired tonight and I'm broke."

"Want to go home? I'll stake you to a ticket."

Mahoney, afraid to give the man money for fear it would go for more booze, helped the tattered figure into his car, drove him to the railroad station, bought him a ticket and got him on the train.

Then he forgot all about it.

Many, many months later Mahoney was sitting in his own office at the Knickerbocker building, not far from police headquarters, when the telephone rang.

The commissioner was late to supper. He told his secretary:

"Tell 'em I've gone home."

The secretary told Mahoney it was a long-distance call and the man sounded drunk. He said:

"He sounds like a racetrack character."

Mahoney wearily reached for the phone.

The voice was slurred by drink.

"I told you I'd pay you back for that time you staked me to a ticket to Philly.

"Well, I've never been a squealer, but I know you're looking for racetrack crooks, and I owe it to you to give you a tip.

Some guys switched Rounco and Flying Kilts at Laurel, and they run Flying Kilts twice at Pimlico as a ringer just a few days ago. I know the guys that are in it."

CALLED FORRESTER

Mahoney stalled the man on the phone. He talked about anything and everything, but mostly, he asked him to come to Baltimore and tell him the details. Meantime he told his secretary:

"Get Forrester over from headquarters right away!"

The secretary used another extension.

The big detective cruiser's siren, with Lt. Clarence Forrester, head man of Mahoney's "police force," sounded loudly. Mahoney had to hold his hand over the telephone mouthpiece to prevent the groom in Philadelphia from hearing it. He said:

"Come down here tonight. Where are you?"

"In a bar room."

"Put the bartender on."

There was a pause and a new voice came into the picture.

It was the bartender.

Mahoney told him what he wanted. He urged the bartender to put the man on the next train for Baltimore, and to buy him a ticket.

Mahoney promised to repay him.

The bartender was as good as his word. At the Pennsylvania Station, where Forrester, Sgt. U. B. Huff and Mahoney were waiting for him, the groom arrived according to schedule.

The first thing the groom said was:

"Pull them curtains down. If them guys was passing on the street and seen me here, I'd be a dead man."

KEY WITNESSES

Then he told his story. It was then 11 p. m. Hours later Mahoney was on his way home, and at about 2 a. m. the big, sleek police car, with two more policemen flanking the groom in the back seat, started off on the Washington boulevard bound for Laurel.

It was a couple of months after the crooked races had been run, and most of the figures in the fix had gone to distant parts, but there were seven key witnesses to be picked up at Laurel, their destination.

As they drew near, the shivering informant insisted on getting down on his hands and knees on the floor of the automobile.

He'd shove his head up like a turtle, direct the officers where to drive, then pull his head down again.

Each time they'd pull up in front of a place where a man was later to be taken into custody he'd point, then duck down again.

By 4 A. M. they had rounded up their flock of witnesses. Among them was a young jockey who turned out to be the key witness in the case, Jockey Joe Matral.

The questioning of these witnesses revealed the guilty ones, R. B. Sanner, a trainer, and James S. O'Donnell, of Washington, D. C., operator of a racing stable.

Both of them eventually were sent to prison by the Criminal Courts in Baltimore. Sanner for 18 months and O'Donnell for two years, the first of two such cases in which Mahoney was to provide the evidence.

INDICTMENTS RETURNED

There was a lot more to it, but most of it was front page news and featured on the sports pages as the mill of justice ground along.

The indictments were returned April 9, 1946. Yet final action on the case did not come until June of this year.

There were many lurid interludes and long hours of work for Mahoney and his police officers before the case was complete.

There was the difficulty in finding Rounco, who was at last uncovered on Sanner's brother's farm in Anne Arundel county.

It was a job also to find Flying Kilts, which, by some clever detective work, Mahoney's agents found had been shipped to an obscure farm in West Virginia.

It was especially difficult, for instance, to prove the differences between the two horses, which were both solid-colored bays.

They were helped by Dr. Frank Keller, the commission's chief veterinarian, who discovered that Rounco was an old patient of his, and happened to remember an oddity in the horse's mane "just like a kid with a cowlick."

Then there was the "kidnaping" of Joe Matral," who was grabbed by unidentified persons in Charles Town, W. Va., and an attempt made to force him to change his testimony.

It was this ringer case and one other that convinced Mahoney of two things:

1—There should be a receiving barn in Maryland.

2—There should be a "Bertillon" method of identifying horses.

It was a tough fight all the way but Mahoney, before his term ended saw both of these systems adopted.

In tomorrow's Boston American, the story of the Don't Delay ringer case is revealed.

Grid Team of Ex-H. C. Coach Branded

TEMPE, Ariz., Jan 30 (AP)—Arizona State College and Tempe in the University of Nevada has severed all athletic relations in protest said the college board, of "pecuniary eligibility standards" at the Reno school.

Announcement of the break came in response to a letter from thereafter as I remain as director Nevada Coach Joe Sheeketski suggesting another two-year home-and-home football agreement.

In Reno, Sheeketski said comment at this time "would pour more oil on the fire." He said, however, Nevada would adhere to Pacific Coast Conference eligibility rules next fall "and as long of athletics."

Nat Hickey, One Of Original Celts, Plays Here Tonight

By SAM BROGNA

A touch of the old brand of basketball will be mixed in with the present day game when the Providence Steam Rollers invade Boston Garden tonight for their Basketball Ass'n of Amer'a fussle with the local Celtics.

Nat Hickey, the only active member of the famed Original Celtics whose one-time set shot wizardry laid them in the aisles in the '20s and '30s, will see action with his Steam Rollers.

On Jan. 2, Hickey took over the Providence club, never giving a thought that he would be playing the game again. His return was accidental but until he finds enough players of ability to take his place, he will remain as player-coach.

Hickey made his first appearance as a Roller Tuesday night when one of his new players failed to put in an appearance and he flashed his old-time form in moving the ball, although he was not able to help his club stave off defeat.

He played again Thursday against the Knickerbockers.

In addition to Hickey, four other new players make their local debut with the Rollers. This quartet includes Bill Downey, Marquette; Bob Hubbard, Springfield, Lee Robbins, Colorado U. and John Ezersky. Last year Ezersky played with the Boston Whirlwinds.

The schoolboy attraction at 7.30 p. m. brings together Somerville and Medford High fives in a Greater Boston Interscholastic league contest.

Midget Racers Spice Derby

By JACK CONWAY, JR.

The Mighty Midgets, ranging from 3 to 11 years of age, make the greatest racing class in the world. The 13th annual 1948 Record-American-Advertiser Silver Skates Derby will have over 350 of these "Mighty Mites" racing for the coveted Silver Skates championship at the Boston Garden on Sunday afternoon. The first races in this Silver Skates Derby will begin at 12 noon.

The midgets are laughs, thrills, spills, hilarity. This season all entry marks for the entire Derby have been broken. There will be 808 skaters in the Garden at starting time. This figure is the largest ever to race in a Silver Skates anywhere in the world. Of these 808 skaters, 363 will be midgets. There are 182 entries in the boys midget division. There are 181 entries in the girls midget division.

This is great proof that the Silver Skates Derby is a great family ice show. The mothers, fathers and the rest of the family will all be on hand to see their little five and six-year olders race for the Derby championships.

Oscar Johnson and Roy Shipstad, directors of the famed Ice Follies, have presented two glittering trophies for the winners of both the senior men's and women's class.

The two favorites to win the men's senior Silver Skates Derby championship are Edgar Dame, Revere, and Connie Lambert, Lynn.

STARS — Jane Weiss, left, Marion Murphy and Wilhelm Junker will perform in the Derby.

Records Show Non-Players Most Successful NHL Pilots

By BILL GRIMES

Is a playing career in the major league essential to assure the success of an NHL coach?

Would you believe that the Stanley Cup has been won 13 out of 27 times by clubs, which were under the supervision of men who had never played professional hockey?

Do you know that it wasn't until the eighth Stanley Cup series that a former NHL player (Eddie Gerard) was listed as coach of a world's championship club?

Ex-players should know all of the answers but it doesn't necessarily follow, that they'll click as coaches. Knowledge of the playing angle is not as important in hockey as the ability to handle men. Club harmoney is of vital importance. Too many ex-player-coaches have attempted to alibi their shortcomings and mistakes by passing the "buck" to the players.

Here is the list of men, who, although they never scored a goal or opened up the noggin of an opponent in the NHL, or probably any other league, pulled the strings which maneuvered teams to the Stanley Cup—Pete Green, Dick Carroll, Eddie Powers, Leo Dandurand, Dave Gill, Cecil Hart, Bill Stewart and Conn Smythe.

On no less than three occasions, Pete Green steered the Ottawa Senators to world's championships. Cecil Hart piloted Les Canadiens to the Stanley Cup on successive years, Dick Carroll coached the Toronto Arenas the first winners of the Stanley Cup. The late Eddie Powers, who spent many winters here as coach of the Westminsters and the Boston Tigers, piloted the St. Pat's of Toronto to world supremacy in the spring of 1922 and Dave Gill duplicated that feat with the Ottawa Senators in 1926-27 by beating the Bruins in the finals. It was under Leo Dandurand that the Flying Frenchmen of Montreal won the Stanley Cup for the first time. And, the biggest shock the Canadian hockey fans ever encountered was when our own Bill Stewart took the Maple Leafs over the jumps with the Chicago Blackhawks 10 years ago and grabbed the battered old mug.

I presume that the uninitiated wonder why Conn Smythe's name is on the above list. Although officially listed as manager of the Maple Leaf clubs in the books, he always has been the coach. He did the master minding for Dick Irvin when Toronto won the Stanley Cup back in 1931-32 and he was entitled to cut two more notches on his gun (although Hap Day was enrolled as the coach) when the Leafs grabbed the world's championship in 1945 and again last spring.

Probably Conn Smythe would like to take a bow because the Maple Leafs took four straight from the Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup finals in 1942 but the truth is that he was overseas with the Canadian Army.

B'S RECALL PEIRSON

The Boston Bruins have recalled Johnny Peirson, 22-year-old right-winger from the Hershey team of the American League. He will join the team for the Chicago Black Hawks' game here Saturday.

Peirson was a member of the Bruins for seven games at the start of the season but did not

MAX BAER SUED

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 30 (AP)—Max Baer, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, is the defendant in a $120,000 civil damage suit filed yesterday by Herbert Seal, electrical contractor, whose complaint accused Baer of assault and battery.

Seal contends Baer cursed and struck him last Armistice Day in a traffic argument. He asks $50,000 for his injury, a like amount for his wife, Mrs. Mae Seal, and $20,000 for his daughter Marlin, 5. Seal charged they were "frightened and terrified" by the alleged assault.

Horsemen Rue Split In Maryland Dates

BALTIMORE, Jan. 30 (AP)—Unorthodox 1948 racing dates have Maryland horsemen worried today over the effect they may have on the caliber of the thoroughbreds attracted to the meetings.

Havre de Grace, sidestepping competition from Garden State Park in New Jersey, had second half of its meeting moved up to July. It will mark the first time in state history a major track has operated in midsummer.

This broke up the time-honored system under which racing moved from track to track with little lapse in between.

It means that Bowie will start March 29, the earliest opening date in Maryland annals. The first Havre meeting in April skips programs on four days.

There will be no racing in the state between May 15, when Pimlico closes, and July, when Havre de Grace tries out summer programs.

TED TO FLY HOME

Ted Williams, the newest daddy on the Red Sox, plans to fly here Sunday, cutting short his fishing vacation in Florida, to see his wife, Doris, and little Barbara Joyce, born prematurely Wednesday at the Richardson House of the Boston Lying-In Hospital.

He talked by phone with his wife yesterday and they decided to go south after she leaves the hospital.

Olympics Play Valleyfield On Arena Ice

Determined to shake off the jinx of losing games on Arena ice, and intent on making a playoff berth in the Quebec Senior hockey league, Boston Olympics go after Coach Philbin's Valleyfield Braves tonight at the Arena. So far this season the Olympics have been unable to win at the St. Botolph st. rink, but Coach Harrington and his crew are confident that tonight's the night.

The much-traveled Olympics will stay in the Hub after tonight's scrap for another Quebec loop battle on Sunday afternoon with the team that has been poison to them all season, Player-Coach George Imlach's Quebec Aces, and the Pics will be out to set their nemesis back on its heels, come Sunday afternoon.

Reds Throw Miller on Trading Block

NEW YORK, Jan. 30 (AP)—Eddie Miller, slick fielding shortstop, has talked himself out of a job with the Cincinnati Reds. The 31-year-old infielder will be offered to any other club in the National League today.

Club President Warren Giles and Mgr. Johnny Neun, here for the circuit's annual meeting which starts today, revealed their plans to dispose of Miller in a joint statement yesterday.

"We have discussed the Eddie Miller situation thoroughly and are announcing to all National League clubs at the meeting that Miller's contract is available to any club in the National League. We want to make the best player deal possible."

Informed of Giles' and Neun's plans to deal him off, Miller said in Cincinnati, "I thought the Reds would make an attempt to trade me. I think it would be best for the team if I were traded.

"I know that some of the boys were hurt by what I said during the last two weeks, although I had no intention of hurting them. I will do the best I can for whatever team I am traded to and also will do my best to keep my big mouth shut for a change."

Miller recently put the blast on the way Neun ran the club in addition to criticizing the performances of a number of his mates.

Sportsmen's Show Opens 23rd Season

The 23rd annual New England Sportsmen's and Boat Show will display the "new look" when it opens tomorrow noon at the Mechanics Building.

The outdoor extravagancer will feature all types of outdoor events and competitions in the miniature lake in the main hall. The top woodchoppers, canoeers, log rollers, flycasters and bait casters, will be on hand to display their prowess.

Science enters almost all lines of endeavor today, even in the pursuit of finny prey. A few of the latest designs that will amaze the old timers are pocket size fishing poles, folding transparent minnow traps, and F-38 modeled lures.

The exhibits will depict the northern timberland in its natural regalia. Species of the various denizens of the north country will be displayed throughout the hall.

Babe Dedrikson, the world's foremost women's athlete, will show her wares, as well as many other outdoor illuminaries.
